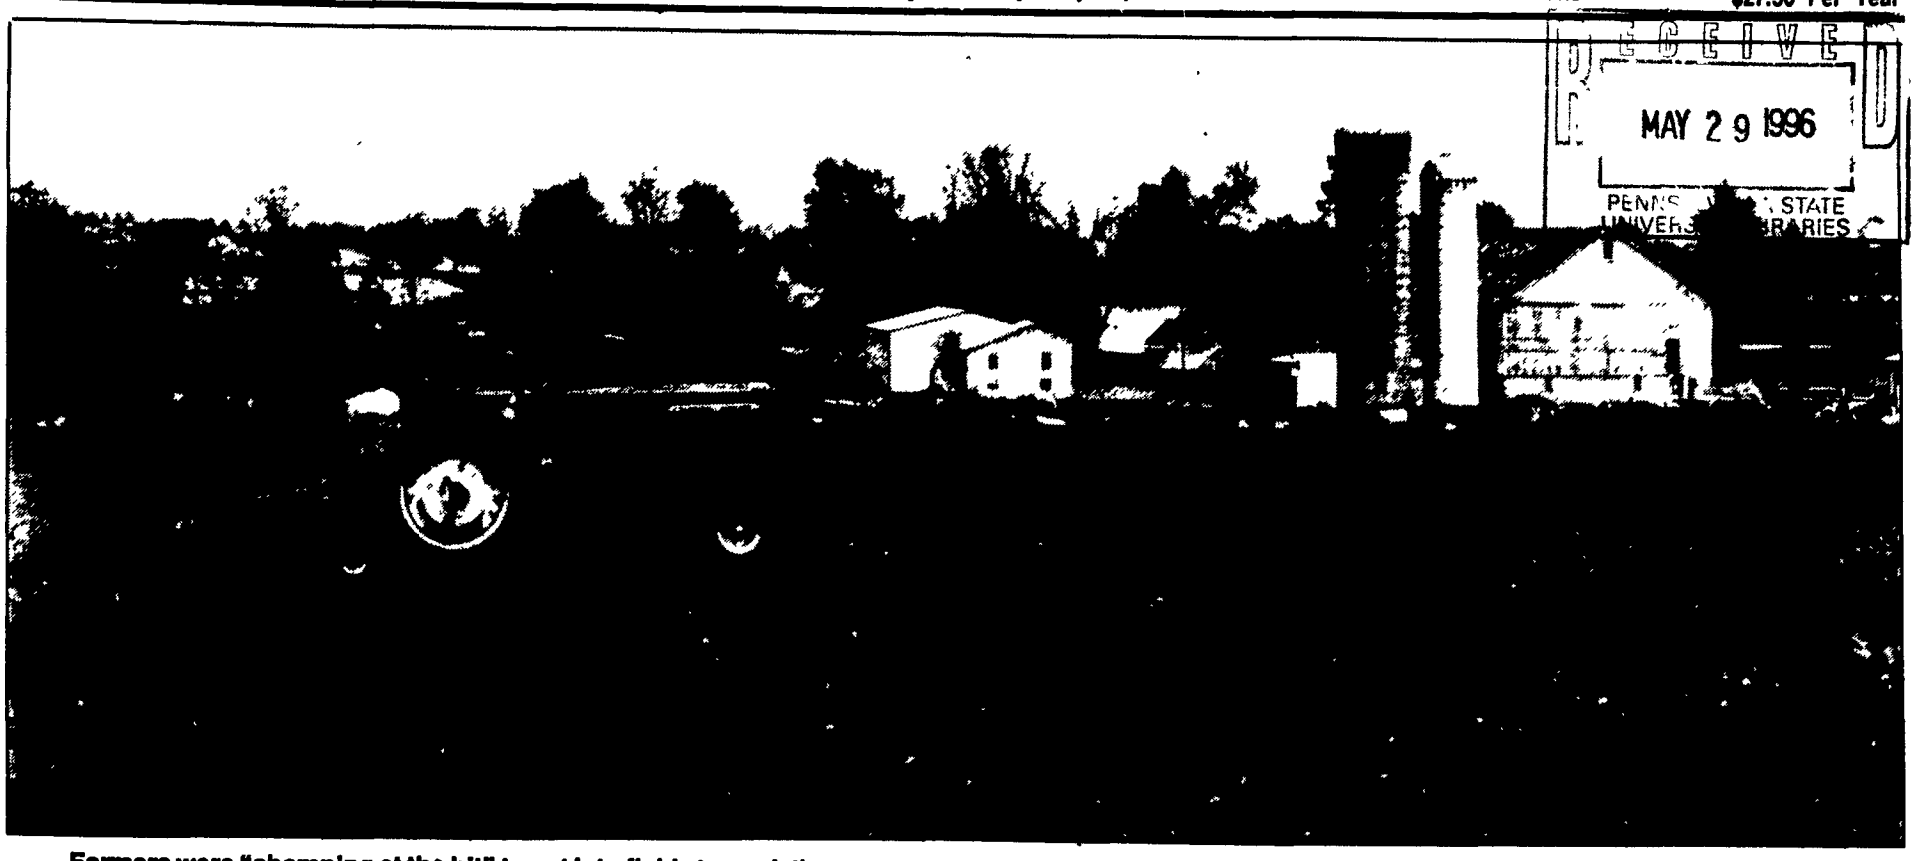
PENNS... STATE
UNIVERS... RARIES



Farmers were "chomping at the bit" to get into fields to work the ground, plant corn, and harvest grass, as the weather cleared early in the week. But in many fields, the tractor tracks were so deep that tillers and planters left the tread marks showing. Before the next rain hit Wednesday night, a few hours had been spent in planting. Others were trying to harvest rye and other grasses. Much of the crop was still too high in moisture to make really good haylage, but the alternative was to let more rain fall on it Wednesday night and Thursday.

The Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service reported that farmers had only half the number of days suitable for fieldwork this year compared to 1995. Corn planting progress was slow. Some earlier planted corn has emerged and is yellow due to cool and wet conditions.

Frost Tuesday morning nipped many of the early crops and fruit flowers across the state with the coldest spots reported down in the teens in northern counties. In many areas, however, extensive damage was not expected because many of the crops have yet to be planted, and early warnings by the weather service gave many people time to protect their plants.

For many farmers, planting corn and harvesting first cutting hay will now come at the same time, and they will need to decide which is more important to do first in their farming operation. The photographer caught this tillage operation Wednesday afternoon at Ed and Shenda Sensenich's Sen-Shine Farm along Temperance Road, west of Lititz, in Lancaster County. Photo by Everett Newswanger, managing editor.

Community Supports Agriculture In This Kimberton 'Garden Of Eden'

ANDY ANDREWS

KIMBERTON (Chester Co.) — What if?

As in: "What if you took somebody's really diverse backyard garden and exploded it?"

As he says this, Kerry Sullivan opens the door to a 76-foot long high tunnel filled with the smell of leafy vegetables. On a jute rope, robust cucumber vines languidly snake upward while romaine, leaf, and butterhead lettuce stretches to cover ground rich with compost.

Kerry points to one of the vines and says, with a smile, "These are growing really well."

Because of the recent cold, wet weather, the greenhouse crops provide a hefty boost to start the vegetable growing season.

With wife Barbara, the Sullivans not only grow a wide variety of vegetables organically but are on a mission to prove that small farms can be viable amidst explosive suburban growth.

Their Kimberton Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) farm, which encompasses about 10 acres of ground leased from a nearby private school outside Kimberton, is very diversified. The literal "community garden" is home to about 55 different flower, fruit, and vegetable plants from which produce is grown for the community in which they live.

Crops are not grown by the acre, but by plots. For instance, the "Almost all of the strawberry beds are adopted by the members," said Kerry Sullivan, left. "Certain members will say, 'I'll take care of this bed for a year, weeding and whatever it needs.' That's worked out very well. So that frees us to grow other produce for them. They get excited about weeding strawberries because they love them." At right is wife Barbara.

North Atlantic Shell Eggs

May 16, 1996
Atlanta, Ga.

PRICES WERE UNCHANGED TO HIGHER. THE MARKET TONE WAS FULLY STEADY TO FIRM. DEMAND INTO RETAIL AND FOOD SERVICE ACCOUNTS WAS MIXED ACROSS THE FULL RANGE AND WAS MOSTLY MODERATE. SUPPLIES WERE GENERALLY NO MORE THAN FULLY ADEQUATE, AND MOST EXCESS EGGS WERE SOLD INTO BREAKING CHANNELS TO FILL A BRISK DEMAND. PRODUCERS WERE MORE INCLINED TO SELL TO BREAKERS SINCE PRICES PAID WERE EQUAL TO GRADER OFFERS, AND BREAKERS RARELY REQUEST PRICE ADJUSTMENTS. THIS COMPETITION ADDED ADDITIONAL FIRMNESS. LIVE HEN SUPPLIES WERE ADEQUATE.

PHILADELPHIA: PRICES TO RETAILERS, SALES TO VOLUNE BUYERS, USDA GRADE A AND GRADE A, WHITE EGGS IN CARTONS, DELIVERED STORE DOOR, CENTS PER DOZEN. EXTRA LARGE .72-.79, LARGE .70-.77, MEDIUM .65-.70.

NY Phil Frozen Eggs

MAY 10, 1996

Prices were unchanged for whites, unchanged to higher for whole egg, blends, and salted yolks, and higher for sugared yolks. The trade sentiment was steady for whites, and fully steady to firm on the balance with yolks in the strongest position. Demand was mixed with most inquiry centered on full and partial loads for immediate delivery. Floor stocks were generally no more than adequate. Breaking stock supplies were usually adequate, but less available than last week. Edible liquid and frozen eggs (ingredients included) processed under federal inspection in the Eastern region for the week ending May 4, 1996 were 8% more than last week, and 8% more than the same week last year.

Delmarva Broiler

MAY 15, 1996

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds ranged light to good and best on the adequate to short supply of 3 pound and smaller sizes Offerings on the heavier weights varied by plant, but were fully adequate overall. Live supplies were moderate to heavy; weights were mostly desirable to heavy. Processing schedules were moderate to heavy. Some plants plan to operate Saturday because operations were curtailed during yesterdays power outage. Less than truckiot asking prices were unchanged at 62 to 74 cents. Trade sentiment was steady. Wings and drums cleared well. Breast items were readily available. Leg quarters were adequate.

National Egg Market

MAY 15, 1996

Prices were unchanged to higher in the Northeast and Midwest, and unchanged elsewhere. The market tone remained steady to firm. Demand was mixed into retail, best where featured, and food service demand was fair to fairly good. Breaker demand was aggressive, and competition between breakers and graders for nest run eggs continued. Supplies were barely adequate to instances fully adequate, and extra eggs generally cleared or were maintained with confidence. Breaking stock supplies were adequate to close under a fully steady to firm market tone. Light type hen offerings were ample for the light demand, and plants remained booked to capacity for the next few weeks.

National Grain Market

ST. JOSEPH, MO
MAY 15, 1996

Sunshine and clearing weather got no respect in the grain and soybean trade Wednesday. Trends highly mixed for different commodities, except soybeans definitely lower. Wheat 1 to 14 cents lower, except Portland 9 to 7 cents higher. Corn 1 to 7 cents higher, except the corn state of Iowa 2 to 1 cents lower. Sorghum 4 cents higher to 3 cents lower. Soybeans 2 to 4 cents lower.

Most sunshine for any one day the past three weeks in the Western Combelt today and moving East. However, ground is waterlogged many places and will take a few days before corn planter and wheat drills can start rolling again. Forecast next 6-10 days calls for continued cold and damp conditions in Spring Wheat country and crops much behind normal. Trade war talks in the making for one of our big customers, China. Many elevators lowered their basis and futures also lower. New crop Hard Red Winter wheat quoted 7 over the July and many producers very happy with 6.55 wheat if it holds through harvest. If sunshine gets into Eastern Combelt and dries out the area, many more acres of corn will be planted even though it is getting late in the season. High prices draw big acreage and a little gamble, despite the fact normally yields drop one bushel per acre per day after May 15. Elevators adjusted their corn basis lower today but throwing out December bids of 3.58 for new crop and that is at a very good money-making level. Soybeans taking a low profile and just waiting to see how many acres King Corn will leave them. Elevators bidding 7.80 for new crop beans and that is a very good alternative to go to if corn does not get planted.

The Old Farmer's Almanac This Week With

MAY 20-26, 1996

NATIONAL MARITIME DAY, MAY 22.

TRAMPS & STOWAWAYS

What's more all-American than forsythia and lilacs? But neither is native. Forsythia made its way from South China to London by way of Robert Fortune, a plant hunter for the Royal Horticultural Society. It was then named for William Forsyth, a founding member. A few plants set sail for America with settlers in 1860. Lilacs, from the Persian word for indigo, may have come from Persia to New Hampshire in 1695 and later traveled west across America. This, and many entertaining garden tidbits from rhubarb tonics to singing earthworms, can be found in The Old Farmer's Almanac Book of Garden Wisdom, published by Random House and available now in bookstores. (Or call 800-426-9922.)

"Planting is one of my great amusements." – Thomas Jefferson

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Cut herbs just as the dew does dry. Tie them loosely and hang them high.

AUNT SYLVIA'S ZUCCHINI PANCAKES

(from The Old Farmer's Almanac Book of Garden Wisdom)

3 cups grated zucchini (unpeeled)
1/2 cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
2 eggs, lightly beaten

Squeeze some of the excess water out of the zucchini. Mix the dry ingredients together; combine with the zucchini and eggs. Drop by spoonfuls into a hot, buttered skillet to make pancakes about 2 to 3 inches across. Brown on both sides. Eat hot for lunch with grated cheese and/or a dab of fresh tomato sauce.

Makes 2 or 3 servings.

The Old Farmer's Weather Proverbs

Dry May, wet June.

If you throw a cat overboard, there'll be a storm at sea.

Cold, wet May, barn full of hay.

If the sky looks brassy in the west at sunset, there will be high winds coming soon.

He that is in town in May loses his spring.

OK City Feeder Cattle

OKLAHOMA CITY, OK
MAY 15, 1996

Compared to last Monday: Feeder steers firm; feeder heifers 1.00-2.00 higher. Stocker steers and heifers steady. Demand moderate to good. Quality and conditions similar to last week. Weigh-ups gaunt to full. Quality of supply plain to average, moderate end attractive. Bulk supply feeder cattle and these in medium to fleshy condition. Flesh generally lighter than a typical May off wheat run. Light rains Monday thru most of Oklahoma. Slaughter cows .50-1.00 higher. Slaughter bulls 1.50 higher. Packer demand good, especially from Northern buyers. Texas plants continue to receive enough local cows but many of these thin and light weight thus they show some interest locally for the better cows. Replacement cow buyers very quiet. Long bred cows over 7-8 years old as well as young fall calvers going mostly to slaughter. Good quality young pairs selling at slaughter equivalence. Total of 500 cows and bulls sold, 85 percent going to packers. Receipts this week 15,450; last week 10,120; last year 10,740. Supply consisted of 81 percent yearlings over 600 lbs; 16 percent calves and light yearlings; 3 percent cows and bulls. Prices follow with weighted average weight and price in parenthesis. OPINION

Questions To Answer

Now farmers have a framework to help construct communication with the non-farm public. Hands-on House, a children's museum in Lancaster, provides interactive learning opportunities for all children and their families. Through self-directed exhibits and programming, they stimulate curiosity and invite the joy of discovery through play. The museum features eight theme exhibits, including one in progress that will help communicate farm life and the business of farming to these inquisitive families.

To prepare the farm exhibit so that it would deal with modern farming rather than a sentimental view of a '60s homestead, the creators asked family constituents to ask all the questions they would like to know about the farm. Out of this exercise, a list of questions were assembled.

We believe this list offers a concrete insight into what farm communicators should be answering in their public educational efforts to bridge the gap between farmers and consumers. Here are the questions. How would you answer these sincere inquiries about your farm life and business?

Crops:

Why do farmers spread manure? How does it help the soil?

How do the farmers prevent the soil from washing away with the rain?

Why do they make those patterns with the plow?

How do the farmers know when to plant the seeds?

Why is some corn stored on the cob and some is taken off?

How do seeds grow?

How does crop rotation work?

What is organic farming?

What are all the different tractors for?

What is a typical day like on a crop farm? What time does the work get started? What do the workers do?

Do we need to fertilize so much? Isn't crop rotation better for the environment?

How do you keep the plants watered?

How do they mow the field?

What is grown in Pennsylvania?

Why are farmers sometimes paid not to grow food?

How do farmers plant seeds?

What is the easiest plant to grow on a farm?

What kind of dangerous chemicals are used on a farm?

How does a farmer get the soil ready for planting?

Animals/Livestock:

How are cows milked?

How much milk does one cow give in a day?

What do cows eat? How much do cows eat? What's in silage?

Why are our local cows mostly black and white spotted?

What is an ideal cow for milk production?

What kinds of animals produce milk?

Where do horses and cows sleep?

Do cows bite?

Do the different animals fight?

Why do farmers leave the cows out in the rain?

How many times a day do cows get milked?

Do farm animals get sick?

How many kinds of horses are used on Amish farms?

Why do cows lie down before a storm?

Do pigs really like the mud?

Why does Lancaster County have relatively few sheep?

Eggs/Poultry:

How many eggs do hens lay in a week?

How are eggs collected?

How are eggs handled so that they don't break?

How do eggs set sorted by size?

Miscellaneous:

Who pays for everything on the farm?

Why are barns often red?

How do farmers stand the smell?

How are we going to save farms?

How many different kinds of farms are there in Lancaster County?

Does every farm have cats in the barn?

Do farmers follow the Farmers' Almanac?

What does the farmer do in his spare time?

What do the children help with?

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Evaluate Crop Economics

Which comes first, harvesting alfalfa hay or planting corn?

According to Robert Anderson, extension agronomy agent, it depends. It depends on the weather forecast, the stage of growth of the hay, and whether you feed or sell the hay.

Facts to consider: corn yields usually drop one bushel per day for the first 20 days after the end of the optimum planting date and then the decrease increases to two bushels per day for the next 20 to 30 days. The end of the optimum planting season is about May 15.

On the other hand, alfalfa quality declines after the bud stage of growth. Penn State forage specialist Dr. Marvin Hall estimates that when alfalfa hay is worth $150 per ton, the average rate of quality decline for each day alfalfa harvest is delayed beyond the bud stage will result in a loss of $6 to $7.50 in the feed value per day per ton of hay harvested.

To Harvest Alfalfa

From the information above, should you plant corn or harvest alfalfa hay on May 21?

Based on Robert Anderson's calculations, by harvesting the hay you will delay corn planting five days. This will result in a loss of about 10 bushels of corn worth $5.50 per bushel for a potential loss of $55.00.

With the hay, the calculation would be 5 days times $6.75 times 2.5 tons for a potential loss of $84.38. The potential corn loss is $55 while the potential hay loss is $84 per acre.

By harvesting alfalfa hay on time you are making almost $30 per acre more money based on these assumptions.

To Deworm Cattle

Chester Hughes, extension livestock agent, reminds us that strategic deworming is an excellent method to control internal parasites in cattle.

Strategic deworming implies there is specific timing for treatment. In our area, a strategic deworming program will include treatment 4-6 weeks after the cattle go to grass and a second treatment in early November.

There is some discussion about the need to deworm mature cows. There will be a benefit in milk production and cow condition, which influences reproduction, if a deworming program is instituted and maintained for a few years.

Eventually, parasite loads will be reduced to the extent treatment may be discontinued and monitored through fecal samples until there is a buildup again. The spring deworming coincides with a good time to ear tag, castrate, implant, and vaccinate calves for clositidial diseases. Therefore, the trouble of the trip through the chute may be a very profitable one.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "Nothing great was ever achieved without enthusiasm."

Editor:

The year is just about over and it is time to pass the crown onto someone new. I cannot believe that my year is over, but I want to thank everyone who believed and supported me this past year.

I devoted my past year to do the very best I could at promoting dairy products and the dairy industry. Depending on who I spoke to they might have heard me compare the game of baseball to milk in my skit, or they got to hear my speech where I praised farmers for all the hard work that they do every day. No matter what I did, I always tried to do my very best, but it takes all of us to promote our industry and dairy products. One way we can do this is by when we go out to a restaurant, order a glass of milk, some cheese on your food, or grab some cottage cheese at the salad bar. No matter where we are we can promote our product by buying it ourselves.

Another time this year I was fooled into buying imitation milk. This made me realize how easy it is to buy imitation, no matter how conscious you are at what you are buying. We must all be aware of how easy it is for consumers to buy imitation dairy products in the grocery store. This upset me, first to buy imitation, but also to know how easy it is to buy because it is located right in the dairy case, where imitation should not be.

But as I look back on my year, I had lots of fun promoting and meeting new people. I'm sure

THE WEIGHT OF THINGS

May 19, 1996

Background Scripture:
Matthew 6:19-21,24-34,
Luke 12:13-21
Devotional Reading:
Luke 12:13-21

For almost 40 years of my life, most people seemed to thing that Communism was the greatest threat to the kingdom of heaven. I never did. The ism I have always feared the most is materialism.

As I write these words, Communism is pretty well in eclipse throughout the world, although I realize that it could always experience a resurgence. But, while Communism has been thoroughly discredited even in the lands where it has reigned so long, materialism threatens us more than ever.

Wherever I see the Gospel of Jesus Christ in serious conflict in our world, materialism is always heavily involved. Essentially, the struggle that rages today is the contest between God and things, between spiritual values and material values. In his book, The Kingdom of God, the late John Bright holds that we are as hooked on false gods today as the ancients were. "For that to which a man looks for his ultimate well-being, his salvation no less, and from which he derives his standards of conduct-that is his god. And we have no lack of them."

ULTIMATE WELL-BEING

To what do we look for our "ultimate well-being" today? Things — birth, shiny things. To what do we look for our "salvation?" Things — pills, booze, sex, and all manner of adult toys. And from what do we derive our "standard of conduct?" — Things — our ethics are basically derived from property values, price tags and profit margins. We no longer ask if something is right or wrong, good or bad, but is it "cost effective?"

In his Retreat From Reason, Alfred E. Cohn says, "The resuce of political, of social, of spiritual values, crushed by the weight of things, is becoming the crucial issue in the will to survive." Those words were written more than 40 years ago and they are even more true today than they were then.

Why should this so surprise us? How do we read the gospels and miss what Jesus has to say about? He tells us that material things are fleeting at best: "do not lay up for yourselves treasures on earth, where moth and rust consume and where thieves break in and steal, but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven..." (Matt. 6:19,20).

Jesus tells us also that material things are rivals to God. "You cannot serve God and mammon." Why, because they are diametrical opposes. He tells us also that material things do no have the power to dispel our anxiety. In fact, the more material things we have, the more anxious we become. "Therefore I tell you, do not be anxious about your life, what you shall eat or what you shall drink, nor about your body, what you shall put on" (6:25).

A FAITH ISSUE

Probably worst of all, materialism is a faith issue because it means we depend upon things, not God: "But if God so clothes the grass of the field, which today is alive and tomorrow is thrown into the oven, will he not much more clothe you, O men of little faith?" (6:30).

So, the sense of life is not in things, but in God: "take heed, and beware of all covetousness; for a man's life does not consist in the abundance of his possessions" (Lk, 12:15). If we focus on what is really important and ultimate, the kingdom of heaven, God will provide the things that we need. "But righteousness, and all these things shall be yours as well" (Matt 7:33).

Money buys things, but He sheer weight of the things that burden our lives never brings lasting joy or peace. As Carl Sandburg put it, "Money buys everything except love, personality, freedom, immortality, silence, peace."

The Althouses will lead a group to the Holy Land, Oct. 9 to Nov. 3, 1996. Space limited. For information, write them at 4412 Shenandoah Ave., Dallas, TX 75205.

New Resource On Isolation Of Breeding Swine

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. — A new educational resource for pork producers was introduced recently during the 27th annual meeting of the American Association of Swine Practitioners (AASP).

"Isolation of Incoming Breeding Swine" is a booklet developed by producers by members of AASP's Swine Health Committee. The text covers the merits of isolation, operation of the isolation facility (including sanitation, biosecurity, and health monitoring procedures), and procedures for isolation of incoming boars and gilts.

"This booklet will increase producer awareness of the value of isolating breed stock before introduction into the main herd," said Dr. Howard Hill, AASP's newly elected president. "It lays out the basic concepts and gives producers the guidelines necessary for managing an effective isolation facility."

Funding fir the publicatiom was provided by the National Pork Producers Council and the AASP Foundation, established in 1990 to encourage research and educational programs that support the pork industry through effective veterinary leadership.

WILL THE IRS INHERIT YOUR ESTATE?

New York Life's Survivorship Whole Life policy was created to provide you and your spouse with life insurance coverage, and needed liquidity, when your estate taxes are due.

It works like this: When one spouse dies, the resulting estate tax can be deferred until after the death of the surviving spouse. At that time, the policy's proceeds become available, and can be used to help pay the usually heavy estate tax. In other words, New York Life makes the proceeds available when they"re needed the most.

You've worked hard all of your life, and shouldn't have to spend time worrying about what will happen to your estate. Call us for all the detaiis and let us show you why New York Life is The Company You Keep.

Community Supports Agriculture In This Kimberton 'Garden Of Eden'

tomatoes are raised on five beds each measuring 165 feet long. Because of the lack of space, no sweet corn is grown.

"The thing about this system that's nice is that we can be so diversified," said Barbara Sullivan. "We don't have cost analyses on every single crop. We look at it as a total system. We're trying to feed people, enhance the environment, and make a good living — not necessarily making the maximum possible profit."

Barbara said what they grow provides a balanced mix that "you would see in somebody's kitchen."

The CSA garden includes about 10 acres of silty loam soil owned by and leased from the Kimberton Waldorf School, a private school for kindergarteners through 12th grade. It is located next to Seven Stars Farm. For years, the land was known as Kimberton Farms. Now it is leased by the Seven Stars Dairy Farm.

Too often, the Sullivans believe, vegetable production focuses on "monoculture" — growing acres and acres of one type of crop, selling bushels and bushels of it wholesale, and trying to make a living using high levels of inputs for maximum yields. Their efforts are looking the other way — through biodynamic farming, as it is called, the Sullivans grow a wide variety of produce with natural inputs for fertility.

The Kimberton CSA was the first CSA in Pennsylvania, begun in 1987, and the third to begin in the country. There are probably about 1,000 CSAs in the country now, according to Kerry.

Both Kerry and Barbara have a wide range of experience in biodynamic farming, which began in Europe in the 1920s and continues strong. Kerry said they were trained in Great Britain to grow crops biodynamically. The method makes use of not only figuring crop nutrition but looking at a wide range of environmental "holistic" factors that provide a healthy crop.

"You learn to think in terms of the farm being a self-contained organism, a living system," said Barbara. "Most of the inputs come from the farm and wastes are recycled on the farm."

With the CSA, which has 150 member-households, people have begun to think in terms of the "community," according to Barbara.

"Members are really excited about it when they join and then it's really a few years before it gets ingrained, and it just becomes a part of their life," she said. "We have quite a few members now that have been with us nine years."

No work is required of CSA members, but some sign up as members of the CSA to contribute to some of the work on the community garden.

"Almost all of the strawberry beds are adopted by the members," said Kerry. "Certain members will say, 'I'll take care of this bed for a year, weeding and whatever it needs.' That's worked out very well. So that frees us to grow other produce for them. They get excited about weeding strawberries because they love them."

Members pay a yearly fee depending on share size. One full share, at a cost of $950, allows members to pick up harvested produce twice a week. A half share, at $600 each, allows members to obtain produce only once a week. In addition, pick-your-own crops are available for much of the season and are included in the share price.

For the fruits, flowers, and vegetables that are pick your own,

CSAs are labor intensive and demand a lot of time and management. But they can draw on a vast membership to volunteer their time. At the high tunnel are, left to right, Cary Oshins, Rodale Institute; Jonda Crosby, RISA associate; and Kerry and Barbara Sullivan, owners of the Kimberton CSA.

Members pay a yearly feed depending on share size. On the blackboard is the produce available when the season opens May 21.

Learn How Community Garden Operates At Kimberton Field Day

KIMBERTON (Chester Co.) — Barbara and Kerry Sullivan will host a field day at their Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) farm near Kimberton on Saturday, June 8, from three to six in the afternoon.

The open house will be of interest to farmers and nonfarmers alike, as the Sullivans work with both the rural and urban communities operating one of the oldest CSAs in Pennsylvania.

From 3 p.m. to 4 p.m. Barbara will discuss Community Supported Agriculture, a form of marketing that is gaining ground in this country. This CSA provides eight months of fresh fruits and vegetables to 150 member families who each pledge up front to pay for their fair share of the produce.

If you are a farmer looking for an alternative marketing strategy, you are interested in starting a CSA, or you are simply someone with an interest in agricultural land preservation, agricultural viability in urbanizing areas, or community involvement in agriculture, this session will add considerably to your understanding of the "how to's" of CSA.

From 4 p.m. to 5 p.m., the spotlight will turn on Kerry, who will lead the tour of the organic/biodynamic farm, focusing on early season and spring-extended vegetable production. Avid home gardeners as well as market farmers will find much to glean from this impressive grower. The Sullivans routinely grow and sell some of the earliest green vegetables and they will be gearing for full production by mid-June and fully expect to continue harvesting through late fall for the CSA members.

From 5 p.m. to 6 p.m., Kerry and Barbara are willing to field questions about their operation, composting, CSA, biodynamic and organic production, and any other questions participants might have. This open session will allow the participants to get the "nitty gritty" from the farmers in an informal dialog.

Preregistration is requested. Please call Kathy Koehler at (610) 683-1415 to register and to receive detailed directions. The farm is located on Seven Stars Road opposite the Kimberton Waldorf School. Refreshments will be available from 2:30 p.m.

This field day is sponsered by RISA, the Regional Infrastructure for Supporting Agriculture Project, and is supported by a grant from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation.

members can harvest as much as they like.

Members can make suggestions about what they want to see grown but the farmers make all final decisions about production. A volunteer "core group" of members and farmers makes decisions about share prices, farmer compensation, and distribution policies and organizes special events in the garden.

Some of the philosophies of the Kimberton CSA, like most CSAs, can often go against the beliefs of more conventional vegetable production.

"The basic idea of the CSA," said Barbara, "is that we get away from the idea that the consumer is looking for the lowest price and the farmer's looking for the highest price. We try to sit down together and decide what's fair and what's going to be sustainable in the long run, because what members want are fresh vegetables picked the day they get them. If we can't arrange ourselves so we can do this in the long run, they just won't have the vegetables available. If we can't make a living, then, the vegetables aren't here."

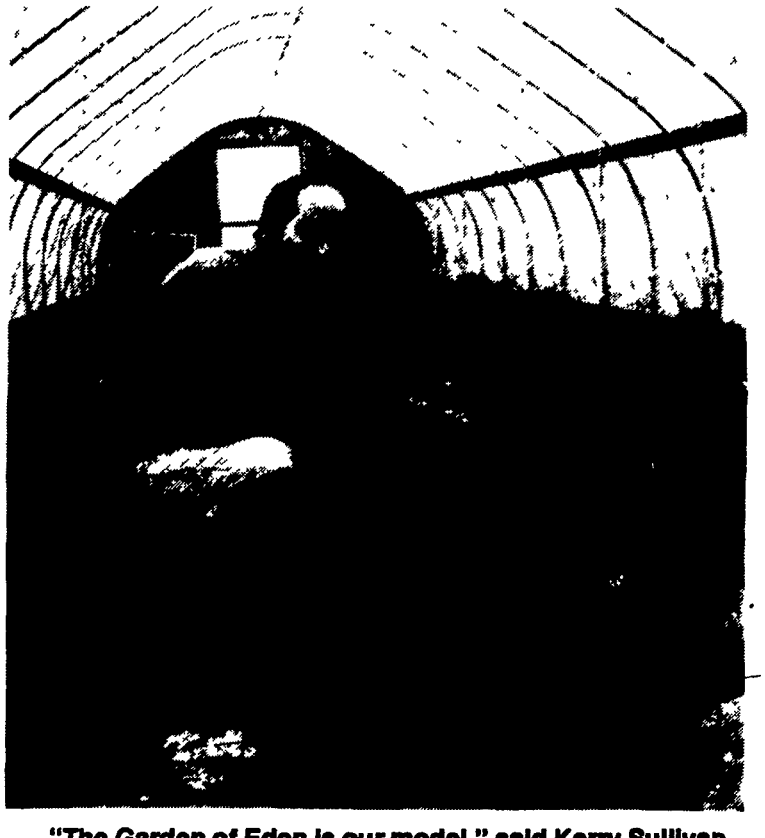
Growers, especially those looking to grow one type of vegetable at high production levels and sell it on the wholesale market, "tend to focus on the specific nutrient needs of each crop." But biodynamic farmers "try to look more at the health of the whole system."

As a result, CSAs are labor intensive and demand a lot of time and management. Additional labor is provided by two or three full-time trainees plus any members who want to volunteer their time.

CSAs continue to grow. Lancaster County already has several. Bucks County and areas surrounding Philadelphia, including Chester and Berks, continue to see CSAs sprouting up — usually in areas where the modern way of thinking in terms of high production agriculture has been pushed to the wayside.

Last year, the Kimberton CSA was host to a composting field day late in September with the help of Cary Oshins of the Rodale Institute, with Jonda Crosby, Penn State RISA project and Sally Pick, Montgomery County extension. Rodale, like Penn State, is a member of the Regional Infrastructure for Sustaining Agriculture (RISA) project. The RISA-sponsored field day, scheduled for early June, is suppported by a grant from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation.

(Turn to Page A22)



"The Garden of Eden is our model," said Kerry Sullivan. "Members can simply wander in their garden — as much as they want to take it as their garden." Kerry inspects cucumbers inside the high tunnel.

The field day will also highlight the technical aspects of the farm and how CSAs differ from traditional vegetable farms.

The field day is scheduled on Saturday, June 8, from 3 p.m.-6 p.m. at the farm (for more information, see the accompanying article in this issue of Lancaster Farming). Refreshments will be served.

The CSA makes use of no "synthetic" pesticides or fertilizer, according to Barbara. According to Kerry, to control insects, Bt or Rotenone can be used as a last resort.

Barbara indicated that the realities of raising the crop often dictate what will be necessary to use "to adapt to the world that we live in."

Nutrients for the vegetables are obtained through various composting methods — one involving dairy manure, another household food scraps, and another, green manures.

There are many benefits, in addition to the environment, that make CSAs viable. They often serve as educational centers for children about where and how food is grown. Even children who normally have a hard time eating vegetables "pull them out of the ground themselves and take them home and have a relationship with them, and they start to eat them more," said Barbara.

"Our intention here is to have the healthiest ecosystem and to grow food that is healthy and gives as much vitality to the people that are eating it as possible," she said.

According to Jonda Crosby, RISA project associate, consumers in urban and suburban areas are always asking where to get produce fresh from the farm. The Kimberton CSA provides "a way for the project to reconnect consumers with their food," said Crosby. "And this is a living, breathing example of a successful farm."

Crosby indicated that in the region, more and more acreage is lost to houses and industrial development. But some acreage remains — viable plots of 10 or more acres that can be converted to a CSA.

"Even in a really developed area, there are still chunks of land that are left," said Crosby. She mentioned that parts of Montgomery County, a large suburban growth area, can be managed by CSAs. "There's a lot of land in these urbanized areas. If we could think a little bit differently about what farming is and look at different models of how food can get to consumers, rather than our traditional thinking that we have to have crates and crates and crates of apples or potatoes and hundreds of acres to be a viable farm, it would work.

"There are alternatives and people can make a living from them," said Crosby.

According to Oshins, newer communities are forming and "want to maintain a connection with farmland," he said. A CSA can provide that kind of "bridge" to consumers.

"The Garden of Eden is our model," said Kerry Sullivan. "Members can simply wander in their garden — as much as they want to take it as their garden."

"Producers and consumers are working so closely together to set up a system that's really sustainable economically," said Barbara Sullivan. "So we'll be here 20 years down the road, hopefully."

The season for the Sullivans opens on May 21 and lasts until Christmas.

USB Requests Proposals For Projects

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — As a first step toward selecting national soybean checkoff projects for the 1997 Fiscal Year (Oct. 1, 1996-Sept. 31, 1997), the United Soybean Board (USB) is asking all interested organizations, institutions, and individuals to submit preproposals for FY97 projects dealing with issues in USB's international marketing, domestic marketing, new uses, and production program areas.

"This process helps us look through a large variety of ideas and expert suggestions in a fairly short amount of time so our directors can choose projects that most wisely invest checkoff dollars to benefit producers," said Jerry Slocum, USB chairman. "We're searching for entities to develop and implement quantifiable programs and activities that increase the end use and consumption of U.S. soybeans, thereby, enhancing the profitability of U.S. soybean farmers."

Potential contractors must submit the preproposal form based on selected issues for each of USB's four program areas by April 29. To receive the appropriate forms and additional information regarding the program areas' issues, interested individuals/groups should fax Don Gutgsell, USB, at (314) 576-2786. Include name, address, phone number, and fax number for immediate response.

Rain, Cool Temperatures Delay Corn Planting

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — According to Penn State agronomists, recent rainy weather and cool temperatures have delayed corn planting in much of the state during the first two weeks of May.

The May 8 national 6 to 10 day outlook calls for higher than average rainfall and cooler than normal temperatures. As a result, the odds are high that much of this year's corn crop in Pennsylvania will be planted much later than normal.

Long-term planting date response studies indicate that delaying planting until late May reduces grain yields by about 8 percent compared to early may planting dates. After late May, however, yield reductions become more severe, increasing to about 20 percent for corn planted in early June. In some of our recent research, silage yields were reduced by about 1-2 tons per acres by delaying planting from May 7 to May 20.

When fields do dry out, there are several considerations that corn producers should think about to try to deal with this situation. Concentrating on planting should be a priority. Reducing additional tillage and switching some fields to no-till could be considered. Also, delaying nitrogen applications until sidedressing could be considered to help speed planting. On optimum or high testing soils, a response to starter fertilizers becomes less likely with delayed planting, so these could be eliminated in some situations if they contribute to slower planting.

Relying more on custom herbicide applications could also be an option, but ag chemical dealers are also likely to be behind schedule. One option may be to relay more on postemergent herbicide applications for weed control. With some of the new products on the market, these postemergent programs are a more effective option than they were in the past.

For producers who consider switching to no-till, remember that if it's too wet to plow it's generally too wet to plant. This rule is frequently overlooked in wet, late years. When planting into wetter than desirable soils it's harder to get good seed slit closure. Firming wheels on planters should be adjusted to achieve good seed to soil contact and seed coverage. This is particularly true if using Prowl herbicide.

Under wet soil conditions, bubble coulters are more likely to cause sidewall glazing than eight or thirteen wave coulters. Seeding depth in late planted, moist soil conditions should be governed by the herbicide program. If seed coverage is not needed than a shallower than normal planting should lead to a quicker emergence and help the crop "catch up."

Hybrid selection is also a consideration. It is difficult to generalize about hybrids because of the variation in growing seasons and planting dates across Pennsylvania, but most of the adapted hybrids can be planted two to three weeks later than normal and still mature. Consequently, it is generally not necessary to consider switching to earlier hybrids until the 20th to 25th of May in most areas.

For growers who were planning to use full season hybrids that need most of the available growing degree days in their area, however, they may want to consider dropping back to some earlier hybrids. Not paying attention to hybrid maturity consideration as planting becomes delayed may lead to more of the immature, low test weight corn problems experienced in 1992.

In late planting situationas, consider the intended use of the crop. Fields planned for grain harvest should be planted first, since they will likely be at more risk for lower yields, high grain moisture and possible lower test experience lower yields with delayed planting, but often quality is not reduced unless the crop is killed by an early frost. Delaying planting may lead to later silage harvests, however, so growers should consider this in making harvest or livestock feeding plans.

Growers will also likely encounter more conflicts this year with planting corn and harvesting hay. Generally the reduction in feed value from delaying hay harvest a week for dairy farmers will be greater during late May than the value of the yield penalty from delaying corn planting a week. Consequently, given the choice, dairy farmers who need high quality feed should probably consider harvesting hay. In early June, yield penalties for corn become greater and changes in hay quality are less significant, so then the edge might go to corn planting.

There are some advantages to later plantings that we should remember. Weed control is often improved with delayed planting and the risk of herbicide injury is often greatly reduced. Germination and emergence is much more rapid and we often achieve better stands with later plantings.

Remember also that yields are not always reduced with late plantings. In 1989, when only 42 percent of the Pennsylvania crop was planted by May 30, yields averaged a respectable 103 bushels per acre. Most of our crop yields potential will depend on July and August weather.

Maryland Company To Send Fruit Drinks To Canada

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Lewis R. Riley has announced that a food company based in Baltimore has reached an agreement to export its fruit shake mix to Canada. The company, Flying Fruit Fantasy, plans to market its fruit drinks at more than 100 locations in Canada by 1999 through a license agreement with a Canadian gourmet pretzel chain.

"This is another example of Maryland agriculture and food products now being marketing around the world. I wish the Flying Fruit Fantasy company well in their new Canadian joint venture," said Riley.

The company hopes the export revenue of the fruit shake mix to reach $200,000 per annum once all the 100 locations are complete. Flying Fruit Fantasy distributes fruit shakes through retail locations, hospitals, colleges, offices, arenas, and business cafeterias in the mid-Atlantic region. Now their fruit drink will be found in stores from Halifax to Vancouver.

In recent years, more and more Maryland food companies have begun marketing their products in the international marketplace. Recent examples include ice cream to the Middle East, wine to Canada and Japan, and poultry to Mexico and Europe. The Maryland Department of Agriculture's International Marketing Services is actively working with Maryland companies to break into overseas markets.

Harvest Forages At The Proper Dry Matter Levels

JUD HEINRICHS
Professor, Animal Science
Penn State

An area that is critical in quality feed is harvesting forages at the proper dry matter content, especially if the material is going to be ensiled. If the dry matter content is not correct for the type of storage structure used and results in improper fermentation, then depressed dry matter intakes and lower milk production may occur. In a year of high feed costs and questionable milk prices, you can't afford to put up poor quality forage.

The dry matter content of a forage dictates the ability of the crop to undergo proper fermentation for optimal use of nutrients coming out of a silage storage structure. Proper dry matter content is extremely important for balage in order for it to undergo normal fermentation and minimize the chance of mold formation or a clostridial type of fermentation. Table 1 lists some suggested methods for making hay-crop silage.

In addition to harvesting quality forage, purchasing forage may offer some advantages in reducing overall feed costs and should not be overlooked as an option. Using the Penn State Dairy Forages Template, a break-even price for purchasing forages can be used based on the price of corn, 48% soybean meal, and legume hay. If corn is $4.60/bu, 48% soybean meal is $316/ton, and legume hay is $113/ton, the break-even costs for some forages are as follows:

An example of how the following information can be used is if first cutting legume hay, bud is available for $110/ton, then it is a good buy based on the current prices of corn, soybean meal, and legume hay. However, if the price is over $123/ton, then that hay would not be considered a good buy.

This template is available from Penn State and most local cooperative extension offices at no charge. Break-even prices are also available on many other forages. The template can be customized according to prices in your local area. This program is available for IBM computers that have Excel or Lotus. If interested in getting copy, send a 3.5" disk to "Forage Template" c/o Virginia Ishler, 324 Henning Building, University Park, PA 16875.

Hanson Offers Ardrossan Lucy

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — For the second year in succession the Ayrshire breed and its members have benefited from the generosity of Dr. Hanson, a Colorado member committed to the Ayrshire breed.

Ardrossan Trident Lucy - #1012772, has been donated by Hanson to the national sale to be held July 13 in Mansfield, Ohio.

The proceeds are contributed to a fund utilized for projects directed to genetic improvement of the breed. As many as 30 Ayrshire enthusiasts contributed last year to help the fund swell to $4,500. It is anticipated the same enthusiasm will prevail as Dr. Hanson's donation crosses the auction block July 13.

Breeders are reminded it's possible to make tax deductible contributions to the fund— a commitment that could help increase the pace for Ayrshire genetic process.

Dr. Hanson owns one of the most productive registered Ayrshire herds in the United States and recently added the famed Ardrossan herd following the death of owner Hope Scott of Villanova.

Lebanon To Hold Farm Bill Meetings

NORTH LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Jennifer Hershey, Lebanon County executive director of the Farm Service Agency, has announced that the Agency will hold several meetings to discuss provisions of the 1996 Farm Bill.

Meetings are to be held on Thursdays at 10 a.m. starting May 30 until June 27 at the Lebanon Valley Ag Center.

"The new farm law offers a onshot opportunity to sign up for the new seven-year program," Hershey said. "Once the May 20 through July 12 sign-up period closes, only farmers with land coming out of the Conservation Reserve Program will be eligible to enroll."

"It is critical that all affected people understand the changes that the new farm law will bring to farm operaions," Hershey said. "The Farm Bill places a lot of responsibility squarely on the shoulders of farmers and there is little time left to get all of the information needed to make some important long-term decisions."

At the meeting participants will have an opportunity to view a video-tape presentation by Agriculture Secretary Dan Clilckman and senior Washington, D.C. staff on the general provisions of the new farm law. Local Farm Service Agency staff will brief local participants on the technical provisions of the farm programs.

"Included with the new planting flexibility are some options — and some risks — farmers haven't had to face before," Hershey said. "Crop Insurance has been 'delinked' from the programs, but disaster assistance is gone. This means that with few exceptions, farmers are out of luck if weather ruins their crops.

"Planting flexibility means the market place will decide what and how much, not the government. Farmers will need to learn how to make the most of the markets," Hershey said. "The marketing assistance loans will be a big help, but the decisions are not going to be made for producers — they're going to have to learn the detail of these programs and make all the decisions."

Also at the producer meeting Farm Service Agency personnel will discuss landlord-tenant issues, transition payments, payment limitation, loan rates, formulas for payments, and other technical details of the new farm law.

"This is the biggest change in production agriculture since the Great Depression of the 1930's," Jenifer Hershey said. "Yet all of the changes have to be implemented in the shortest time the Department of Agriculture has even had to implement a new Farm Bill.

"We have a big job ahead of us, precious little time to do the work, a lot of information to share, and we're going to provide people with all the information we can to help them make the best decisions. Implementing farm legislation in the best of conditions is difficult, this year it will be a big challenge," she said.

"The Farm Service Agency's people will get the job done," Hershey said. "We're going to get it done quickly and we're going to get it done right." Call (717) 273-9321 for more information.

Chamber To Coordinate Clean And Green Enrollment

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — In an effort to facilitate enrollment in the Clean and Green program, the Lancaster County Chamber of Commerce and Industry will be coordinating a series of enrollment centers throughout the county.

These centers are designed to provide a convenient opportunity for landowners to enroll in the program. The deadline for 1997 enrollment is June 1, 1996!

At each center, assistence will be provided with the completion of the Clean and Green application form. Any questions applicants may have about the program will be answered during the course of completing the application; therefore, there will be no formal presentation on the intricacies of Clean and Green. These centers are meant only to be a convenience to landowners during one of their busiest times of year.

It will bw necessary for applicants to bring with them the following:

- Recording fee, $13.50, payable to Lancaster County recorder of deeds
- Processing fee, $26.50, payable to Lancaster County treasurer
- Notary fee, if township has requested one

All persons on the deed must be present.

Landowners are not required to bring their assessment notices, but it is highly suggested.

Information offering this service was sent to all townships in Lancaster County. Based on those townships that replied, the Chamber designed a two-week series that will run during the end of May.

The following is the schedule of centers that will be held. The centers are open for anyone to attend, whether or not they are a resident of that township. No appointments are necessary.

For more information, contact Jim Shirk, agricultural services manager, at the Chamber office at (717) 397-3531ext. 62.

Poultry Houses Are Community 'Economic Engines'

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Don't think of them as merely chicken houses. In reality, they are "economic engines."

"Every broiler house that we're turning five flocks over per year, we're generating an additional $1.3 million of economic activity in the area," said John Schwartz, Lancaster County Cooperative Extension director.

Schwartz spoke to more than 30 poultry producers and agri-industry representatives on Monday afternoon at the Penn State-sponsored Poultry Management and Health Seminar at Kreider's Restaurant.

What that economic engine, as Schwartz described it, translates into is increased household income, tax revenue, and money to allied and associated industries — not just the feed mills and processing plants but to the grocery, clothing, electronic, and other stores that make up the local economy. This domino effect creates ripples that have a huge impact on the local economy.

"For every dollar of poultry product we produce, that dollar turns over in the community 5.33 times," Schwartz said. The "5.33" is the "multiplier effect." Based on economic studies, according to the extension director, "we create about 47 jobs for every $1 million in farm sales."

Schwartz provided an example of a typical broiler house that turns out five flocks per year. That translates to about 725,000 pounds of poultry product. At a market value of 34 cents a pound (wholesale dock price and dressing percentage figured in), that means $246,500 in sales. In addition, 250 tons of marketable manure is turned out per year at a value of $6 per ton, or a total of $1,500 per year. That creates a total of $248,000 per year. At a multiplier amount of 5.33, total impact reaches to about $1.33 million for every poultry house.

Each house, at those figures, creates nearly 12 new jobs in the community.

The figures increase as the flock numbers increase. At six flocks per year, 890,000 pounds of marketable chicken is turned out. This translates into sales of more than $300,000, creating 14.3 new jobs in the community.

Tax revenue increases. Farm income for the broiler house approaches about $7,500 per year. The cost of the house alone, not including all the equpment, is about $84,000, and the building rent is about $27,000 per year. On that house in the county, at 17 mills, real estate taxes are $1,428 per year.

For layers, Schwartz used a round number of 100,000 layers operating per year. At 22 dozen per hen house at a marketable price of 47 cents (Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture figures), farm sales reach $1,034,000. In addition, 2,200 tons of manure are generated per year at a marketable price of $6 per ton, or a total of $13,200 per year. Total farm sales are $1.047 million. At a multiplier of 5.33, this creates an economic impact in the community of more than $5.5 million, or about 49 new jobs.

Economic research, according to Schwartz, has indicated that the economic activity generated as a result of using confinement type agriculture has three different components. The activity has a direct input, in terms of creating jobs on the site; indirect, in terms of supporting the local service and supply economy; and induced, which includes a boost in spending power of those employed, as well as increased tax revenues.

Also, producers should think in terms of the houses as rental properties for birds — which would help them realize the economic potential of the investment.

According to Schwartz, for every $1 in farm sales, we create $3.22 in additional wages in the community and are purchasing $2.13 worth of supplies (feed, chickens, electricity, and paper supplies). We generate 47 jobs for every $1 million in farm sales.

"I submit that we're saving family farms," he said, "because in this area, by being able to put up these chicken houses, we're generating additional cash flow that these farm families need to meet the living expenses for that family or be bringing back in a son or a daughter into the family farm," said Schwartz.

The housing creates an investment of capital in the community. "Once we make that capital investment, we're looking at a good 10-15 years of production," he said.

"I think that's very important if we're going to keep a strong, local economy, the producer has to be constantly thinking 'capital investment' if he's staying in this competitive industry."

One way is through helping to change township and borough ordinances that allow the producer to put up confinement housing through "permitted agricultural use" regulations. That way, construction approvals don't have to go through township zoning boards.

There is a township in Lancaster that has such a permitted use, according to Schwartz.

"We need to start to talk about agriculture and farms the way we talk about business," he said.

USDA Names 46 Counties Disaster Areas

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Responding to Gov. Tom Ridge's request, the United States Department of Agriculture has designated 46 Pennsylvania counties as natural disaster areas.

In December, Gov. Ridge made the request because of the crop damage and reduced yields which were caused by drought conditions last summer and fall. Damage assessment reports were completed and confirmed by the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service and the State Emergency Board.

State Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius explained that this designation qualifies some family farmers for Farm Service Agency (FSA) emergency loans due to damages and losses caused by severe drought conditions, beginning one year ago.

"We are very pleased that Gov. Ridge's request for assistance to the commonwealth's number one industry has been honored, and that some farmers will now be eligible to receive assistance," Brosius said. "Last year was very difficult for Pennsylvania farmers as they saw their crops wither and die under the severe drought conditions we experienced in a large portion of the state.

"The drought, coupled with the severe winter of 1996, leaves some family farmers in a very difficult financial situation as they begin their 1996 growing season. This official declaration from the Department of Agriculture will offer some support to our struggling farmers."

Brosius said that estimated Pennsylvania agriculture losses totaled nearly $200 million due to drought damage.

The 46 counties included in the disaster designation are Allegheny, Beaver, Bedford, Bucks, Butler, Cambria, Cameron, Carbon, Centre, Chester, Clarion, Clearfield, Clinton, Cumberland, Dauphin, Elk, Fayette, Franklin, Fulton, Greene, Huntingdon, Jefferson, Juniata, Lackawanna, Lancaster, Lawrenece, Lebanon, Lehigh, Luzerne, Lycoming, McKean, Mercer, Mifflin, Monroe, Montgomery, Northampton, Northumberland, Pike, Potter, Schuylkill, Snyder, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Washington, Wayne and Westmoreland.

There were 20 additionl Pennsylvania counties named as contiguous counties where eligible family farmers may quality for FSA physical loss loan assistance, pursuant to provisions of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act.

Those counties are Adams, Armstrong, Berks, Blair, Bradford, Columbia, Crawford, Delaware, Forest, Indiana, Montour, Perry, Philadelphia, Somerset, Tioga, Union, Venango, Warren, Wyoming and York.

Applications for loans will be accepted through Nov. 12, 1996 for physical and production losses; applications pending on that day may be processed and completed.

Emergency loans will be made under the Farmers Home Administration. Brosius encouraged any farmers with questions to contact their local Farm Service Agency for details and applications for loans.

◆ FARM FORUM ◆

there are people out there that I reached during promotions, especially all the elementary school children. That was my first priority this past year, was to reach the consumers. But I also had fun. I also made some new friends who I'll never forget.

But my year is now over and it is time to say thank you to everyone who helped and supported me. First to my three helpers, Carrie Hetrick and Sherry Hoffman my alternates, and to Maggie Heller my Little Miss. Thank you for all your help this past year, I really enjoyed working with all of you! Next to all my friends and family, without your help, support, and love I never would have been able to do what I did this past year. Also a BIG thank you to my family, dad Ray, mom Frances, and brothers Jeffrey and Michael. And last but not least, to all farmers! I know no one else who works so hard every day.

I dedicate this past year to all of you and what you work for every day. Thank you everyone for giving me the chance to represent you. Here is a recipe for all of you to enjoy using Real Dairy Products, enjoy:

Student's Ag Project Takes Second At International Fair

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — "Topping the thrill of having my students chosen as two of the top three winners at the Lancaster Science Fair," Ephrata Senior High School teacher Patricia Wee said, "seemed impossible."

But when Travis Frey, 18, an Ephrata High School senior and Lancaster's grand champion, was chosen second in his field at the International Science Fair in Tucson, Ariz., both students and teachers were charged with even more excitement.

This was the 47th annual international science fair competition. At the event, 1,067 students from 40 different countries competed for awards from industries, universities, and other sponsors and for first, second, third, and fourth places in each scientific field.

Travis is the son of Barry and Janice Frey, Ephrata and a member of the Cloister FFA. Travis's project, "Solving a Major Problem for Local Agriculture: Elimination of Black Nightshade By Manipulation of Nutrients In the Soil," took the highest award in Lancaster County. He was flown to Arizona to compete against 75 other students in the botany division.

After unpacking and assembling his very large project display which had been shipped to Tucson earlier, Travis successfully presented his research to the judges, whose number nearly exceeded the number of student competitors.

Travis Frey

One judge said to Travis, "We need more people like you working in agriculture."

After nearly two days of judging, students enjoyed trips to Tombstone, the Sonora Desert Museum, and Nogales, Mexico. The week-long event was highlighted with two awards ceremonies, one for auxiliary prizes and one for the scientific division honors. At the latter, Travis emerged in second place.

Travis will begin his college experience at Penn State one week after graduation from Ephrata High School. He will be doing fieldwork there with black nightshade and the method he has developed to eliminate it.

FSA Offers Farm Loans For Socially Disadvantaged

NORTH LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — The Farm Service Agency (FSA) has a loan program designed to help members of socially disadvantaged groups, including minorities to acquire land for farming in Pennsylvania and/or provide operating funds, Jenifer K. Hershey, county executive director said recently.

Under the program, FSA can provide loans to persons in those categories who are interested in farming and can qualify for either a direct or guaranteed farm ownership or farm operating loan.

Applicants who meet the definition of socially disadvantaged must have recent farming experience or training, and be able to demonstrate managerial ability necessary to have a reasonable chance to succeed in the farming venture.

In addition to the other basic eligibility criteria, the applicant must be able to demonstrate that adequate income will be generated to meet essential farm operation and family living expenses and pay the debt.

Socially disadvantaged population groups are Hispanics, American Indians, Blacks, Asians, Alaskan Natives, Pacific Islanders and women.

Persons who think they might be eligible are urged to contact the Farm Service Agency County Office located at 2120 Cornwall Road, Suite 3, Lebanon, PA, Jenifer Hershey said.

Three Complete Field Training

DAVID BIGELOW
Training Coordinator

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Three people recently completed field training to further their education in serving as a technician for the Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association.

Jim LeClair, of New York, Debbie Hart of Mercer County, and Steve Crowley, of New York completed a five-day field training seminar last week. The training is one of several steps in Pa.DHIA training procedures.

Before attending the five-day field training seminar, all new technicians receive initial training, which involves working directly with an appointed trainer from Pa.DHIA.

In the initial training, all aspects of the testing procedures are covered, as well as developing familiarity with a laptop computer.

The overview of responsibilities, sample handling, and equipment procedures are covered in depth.

Pa.DHIA considers on-the-farm training important and newly hired technicians are accompanied by a trainer who explains how the technician is to perform in each of three methods of milking cows — by parlor, pipeline, and bucket.

At this first training, practical situations are covered, such as managing a circuit and recognizing a rule infraction.

Much time is spent on how technicians are expected to handle certain situations that may arise while conducting field duties, with an ever-present commitment to establish and maintain an easy and reliable link for communication between clients, staff and administration.

As the trainee completes two weeks of employment, the trainer again provides another round of training for the technician.

This second layer of training involves having the trainer be together with the relatively inexperienced technician at six different herds. The trainer evaluates performance and determines if additional basic training is needed.

The five-day field training seminar follows shortly after the two-week evaluation.

A span of time between training sessions is built into the system to allow more real-world experiences for the technician, from which questions can be developed. It also allows time for development of communication skills between Pa.DHIA staff and the client dairymen on the circuit.

The field training seminar covers aspects of more advanced technician responsibilities and additional services available through Pa.DHIA.

Involved are such things as learning in-depth the Pa.DHIA Quick Barn Sheet on the laptop computer. A special emphasis of the training is put on the correct use of the computer, as well as having each technician become familiar with each of the options available.

The correct procedure for starting a new herd, handling split herds, technician professionalism and circuit management are among some of the many different subjects covered, along with dealing with unusual or unanticipated barn situations.

An in-depth study of feed and forage is also taught, along with the different formulas needed to calculate milk price.

Special emphasis is placed on using the laptop computer during field training.

Technicians participating in field training also get a tour of the Pa.DHIA sample and meter laboratory to familiarize technicians with the general operations of the cooperative organization.

Learning how PTAs (predicted transmitting abilities, a term to describe the potential genetic "strength" of a pedigree animal's traits) are read, and interpreting the member-client's reports are a high priority goal for the week of technician training. Each report a dairy farmer receives is analyzed and reviewed in depth.

Additional topics covered during this field training include handling the documents and record calculations for cows transferred in-state and out-of-state. Time is specifically set aside for each technician to learn the Pa.DHIA heifer management program and how to fill out the reports.

At the end of the five-day seminar, a certification exam is given to each technician to evaluate whether or not additional training may be warranted.

After six months employment, technicians are evaluated by the manager of the region in which the technician works. The evaluation is conducted by a visit to a farm while the technician is conducting testing. It is determined then if the technician is capable of continuing with limited supervision.

After that, technicians are evaluated on an annual basis, with input from members being served on the technician's circuit. This information, as well as input from the region manager is used to determine what additional training or help a particular technician may need.

Holstein Association Says BullSearch Saves Time

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — Making better decisions in less time is a top priority on most dairy operations, regardless of how many cows are milked.

Using the BullSearch program from the Holstein Association to select sires for a mating program can help increase profit potential and save valuable time, as many producers around the country have learned, according to a Holstein Association news release.

"You get the most out of your time and investment in semen by letting BullSearch take the emotions out of your bull selection," said Pete Kappelman of Meadow Brook Farms in Manitowoc, Wis. Kappelman, who milks 300 Holsteins, said the computerized sire selection program allows him to choose certain traits and the select the bulls accordingly.

BullSearch is a user-friendly software program that contains the most up-to-date sire information available, which is updated every January and July. Producers can sort bulls using their own selection criteria, and then choose sires that are best suited for their herd performance goals.

Because the information is provided from the Holstein Association, BullSearch offers unbiased information. That's one reason Carl George of Delevan, N.Y. likes the program, but the fact that he can select specific traits is important as well.

"This saves us a lot of time when we're sorting out bulls," he said. "We can put in the traits we want, and then the program selects a group of bulls that fit the criteria. We can look at the bulls individually from there."

George said he selects for milk, feet and legs, udders, and pounds and percent protein. When mating heifers, he also considers calving ease. He currently has about 150 cows in the milking string, and about 120 head of young stock.

"The number one reason I use BullSearch is to save time," he said. "When the semen salesmen come to the farm, I can ask them questions using the information from BullSearch. It gives me something to have before they get here."

Having the sire information consolidated in one place saves time when semen sales reps visit Arizona Dairy Co., according to Ross Tappan, general manager for the operation. "With BullSearch I don't feel like I have to see every semen salesperson," he said. "It definitely helps that it's unbiased - you don't get too many complaints from AI when you tell them you used BullSearch, because there's no competition."

The dairy has about 5,500 animals in the milking herd, including dry cows, and raises its own replacement heifers, about 6,000, as well. In addition, bulls are banded and moved to a steer operation on the dairy. All together, there are close to 14,000 animals at the operation.

Tappan has been using BullSearch since it was first introduced in 1986. He noted he believed the program would work for producers with any size dairy operation. "I think anyone wanting to save time should use it," he said.

Kappelman said the user defined Multi-Trait-Index feature allows him to select the herd's sires the way he wants to. "Using an index allows you to easily choose the bulls that best meet your criteria without eliminating certain bulls because of a minimal fault in one area," he said.

He added that BullSearch has helped him define his herd's breeding program. "BullSearch is an unbiased, information-based approach to designing a blueprint for the production and type traits that the next generation of your herd will need to meet your business goals."

Maryland Farmers Offer Bay Conservation Tips

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Maryland Dapartment of Agriculture Secretary Lewis R. Riley announced the spring kickoff of "Take It From Maryland Farmers," an educational outreach program aimed at informing homeowners about practical gardening actions to protect the Chesapeake Bay.

"Take It From Maryland Farmers" highlights various conservation measures—best management practices—that farmers use to produce healthy crops and protect water quality in the Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries. By applying these measures at home, lawn and garden projects, homeowners are encouraged to join Maryland farmers working to protect the Bay.

Interested gardeners can call (800) 342-2507 toll-free in Maryland (outside Maryland call 410-531-1757) to receive a free copy of the Maryland Farmers' Bay-Wise Guide to Backyard Actions for a Cleaner Chesapeake Bay. The guide offers homeowners a variety of easy-to-follow Bay-friendly suggestions for caring for lawns and gardens. Among the many easy-to-follow ideas offered are general rules of thumb for fertilizing lawns and gardens, how to spot and correct erosion problems, and what can be done to control weeds and insects without pesticides.

With the spring gardening season in full swing, homeowners are being urged to join Maryland farmers as responsible stewards of the land by practicing conservation in their own backyards.

"Everyone who works the land has a responsibility to protect the Bay," said Secretary Riley. "Agriculture has a lot of experience in this area that we can share with backyard gardeners."

Research Points To Inexpensive Aid For Acidic Streams

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Researchers in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences have found that a few feet of pipe, some concrete manhole sections, and a pile of limestone rocks can make an acidic stream flow cleaner, thanks to a Swedish idea and a commitment to finding an inexpensive solution to a severe problem.

Dean Arnold, adjunct assistant professor of aquatic ecology in the School of Forest Resources, said tht several diversion wells designed to introduce calcium into streams polluted by acid mine drainage have succeeded in neutralizing the acidic water to levels that allow the return of insects, fish, and other aquatic life.

According to Arnold, a diversion well is a very simple machine with no moving parts that bashes calcium carbonate rocks — limestone, to the layperson — together until the stones are reduced to a size fine enough to be dissolved in the stream. Lime applications have long been used to neutralize acids in soil and water, but applying lime to streams previously was too cumbersome and costly.

Acid mine drainage is caused by seeping groundwater from active and abandoned mines, according to Arnold. Once coal is mined, the surrounding rock material — often containing pyrite — is left exposed to groundwater and oxygen. Pyrite, or iron disulfide, easily dissolves in water.

"Water causes pyrite to break down into two parts — sulfuric acid and ferric hydroxide — both of which are harmful," Arnold said. "We worked with lime applications 15 years ago to neutralize acid rain in lakes and streams and tested various machines to add lime to streams. A machine from Sweden worked like a champion, but it cost $36,000. However, we saw another Swedish company's design for a diversion well, which was much less expensive."

Using the Swedish well as a model, Arnold and his students designed their own version. They used concrete sections for manholes and polyvinyl chloride pipe. A diversion well works by damming a stream and inserting an 8- to 10-inch pipe through the dam to divert water into a large well dug deep enough to allow water to drop at least 8 feet. The water is piped under the pressure of gravity into limestone rocks. The force of the water acts as a giant blender, churning the stones into chips and pieces small enough to dissolve in water. The lime-laden overflow is then reintroduced into the stream.

"The key was to find a system that is inexpensive, simple, reasonably weatherproof and capable of being maintained by untrained personnel," Arnold said. "All you have to do with a diversion well is make sure the well is about half-full of limestone and that water is flowing through the pipe."

Arnold says the best results have come from limestone, also called calcium carbonate, that is about 95 percent calcium. He warns that dolomite, also called magnesium carbonate, will not work in diversion wells because it is harder to break up.

Research conducted over the past two years by Matt Gray, graduate student in wildlife and fisheries science, shows that insect and fish populations significantly improve after treatment. "An acidic stream has a pH of 4, while a healthy stream has a pH greater than 6," Gray said. "The streams treated by our diversion wells get a consistent reading of pH 5 to 5.5."

As a result, Gray relates, acidified streams where few plants, insects or fish could be found before treatment have shown marked improvement in biological indicators of stream health. "Mayflies, which are extremely sensitive to acid in streams, have returned," he said. "We found fish coming back into our study streams as well."

Much of Gray's research centers on whether the improved streams could generate a food system with enough nutrients to support a fish community. He studied sodium loss, which causes high mortality in trout released in acidic streams, and found no significant losses after the diversion well treatment.

Gray also studies how leaves falling into the stream decompose. In acidic water, leaves do not decompose quickly, leaving little food for insects. Gray's research found that leaf litter broke down much faster in the treated water. "Leaf litter is the basis of the food chain in a small stream," Gray said. "Increase decomposition and

As part of the classification promotion, all members who call the Association to sign up for one of the classification programs are eligible for a drawing at the end of each month, with the winners receiving free pedigree coupons. These can be used on any animal at any time during 1996.

By calling to classify, members help the Holstein Association save time and money, which will lower costs for members in the long run. To sign up for classification, or to find out more about the different classification options, call a Holstein Association Member Service representative at 1-800-952-5200.

N.Y., N.J. Milk $13.48

ALBANY, N.Y. — Dairy farmers who supplied milk dealers (handlers) under the New York - New Jersey marketing orders during March 1996 will be paid by handlers on the basis of a uniform price of $13.48 per hundredweight (29 cents per quart); the price for the corresponding month last year was $12.51 per hundredweight, according to Market Adminstrator Ronald C. Pearce also state that the price was $13.59 in February 1996.

A total of 11,195 dairy farmers supplied handlers regulated under the New York - New Jersey marketing orders with 1,051,225,569 pounds of milk during March 1996. This was an increase of 1.6 percent (about 17 million pounds) from last year.

The gross value to dairy farmers for milk deliveries was $143,154,992.43. This included differentials required to be paid to dairy farmers but not premiums, deductions authorized by the farmer, or assessments.

Regulated handlers used 419,926,529 pounds of milk for Class I, 39.9 percent of the total. This milk is used for fluid milk products such as homogenized, flavored, low test, and skim milks. For March 1996, handlers paid $15.15 per hundredweight (32.6 cents per quart) for Class I milk compared with $13.77 a year ago.

Handlers used 178,362,652 pounds of milk for Class II products, 17 percent of the total. Class II products include fluid cream, eggnog, ricotta and cottage cheeses, ice cream, and yogurt. Handlers paid $13.03 per hundredweight for this milk.

Milk used to manufacture Class III products including butter, cheese (other than ricotta and cottage cheeses), and whole milk powder totaled 418,650,759 pounds (39.8 percent of the total). Handlers paid $12.65 per hundredweight for this milk.

Milk used to manufacture nonfat dry milk (Class III-A) totaled 34,285,629 pounds (3.3 percent of the total). Handlers paid $10.27 per hundredweight for this milk.

The uniform price is based on milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat. For March 1996, there was a price differential of 5.4 cents for each one-tenth of one percent that the milk tested above or below the 3.5 percent standard.

the insect community will return."

While Arnold points out that diversion wells are not a long-term solution to acid mine drainage, results of Penn State tests show that citizens' groups and other agencies can maintain a diversion well inexpensively and improve acidic streams to levels that allow stocking and fishing. He adds that coal companies can use the wells as part of their clean-up efforts on active and abandoned mines. A diversion well can be built for about $5,000. A year-long supply of limestone can cost approximately $2,000. "Conceivably, hunting and fishing associations or other groups could maintain a diversion well to establish a stocked fishery," Gray said.

"These wells are very effective and very easy to maintain, which is important when installing one deep in the woods of Pennsylvania," Arnold said.

Gov. Ridge Signs Potato Packaging Bill

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — State Gov. Tom Ridge on Thursday signed into law legislation that allows retailers to package potatoes in variable weights up to amounts of three pounds.

Agriculture Secretary Charles Brosius praised the move in a news release, stating, "The Ridge administration is committed to increasing profitability of farmers in Pennsylvania. This legislation will enable potato growers to meet the demands of a changing market and will mean increased sales.

The legislation, House Bill 2008 sponsored by Rep. Bob Allen R-Schuylkill, makes is legal for retailers to sell potatoes in packages of less than three pounds.

The existing law made it illegal to sell packaged potatoes in lots other than three, five, 10, 15, 20, 25, 50, 100 or multiples of 100 pounds.

According to Tom Lyon, district manager for the Pennsylvania Cooperative Potato Growers Inc., Harrisburg, the law preventing the sale of packaged weights in other than prescribed poundages had been originally created to provide the consumer with reliable amounts of potatoes, instead of having some sell potatoes in 10-pound bags, while others sold them in nine-pound, eight-pound, or some other closely related weights.

The industry-driven law was done to prevent customer confusion and to eliminate the temptation to trick consumers into purchasing lower weights in similar sized bags to higher-weight packages.

Actually, the law change Ridge signed maintains the integrity of the original law, while allowing retailers to sell potatoes in lots less than three pounds in a manner similar to how cheese or meat is retailed — at a cost per pound in variable weight packages.

The new packaging is intended to help the sale of potatoes because smaller families and senior citizens require and want smaller amounts, instead of having to purchase three, five or 10 pound bags of potatoes.

Any packages of potatoes weighing more than three pounds still has to be sold in the prescribed weight increments. The only exception are unpackaged potatoes, which customers can currently select from bins and package themselves. There is no limit on the weights the customer selects.

According to Brosius, the change in regulations will benefit potato growers, retailers and wholesalers, as well as customers.

Lyon said he wasn't sure about the projected impact of the new packaging regulations on customer use and sales, but agreed that anything that can be done to satisfy customer demand will help the industry.

He said that with some of the varieties of potatoes — especially smaller, specialized varieties — the packaging allowances makes good sense.

Sharon Ogden Creates Newsletter For Goat Industry

Goat Connection

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

SILVER SPRING (Lancaster Co.) — After authoring four books on quilt making, and copyrighting original quilt patterns, Sharon Ogden is publishing a goat newsletter.

Raising goats may seem to be a dramatic switch from the sedate craft of piecing, designing, and writing, but Sharon said both goats and quilts are relaxing.

She said, "Working on the computer and writing are two of my loves—besides all the loves of my life currently living in our barn!"

Her interest in goats nrhsm about three years ago when she and her husband Oliver bought their first goat after moving to Thunder Valley Farm in Silver Spring. Formerly from Long Island, N.Y., the Ogdens had lots of questions about goat raising. After a thorough search of resources, the couple found Jacob Fisher, a reknown goat breeder from Manheim.

"He's Mr. Goat himself and I say that respectfully," Oliver said.

After Fisher's prompting to begin a newsletter as a connection among goat owners, Sharon agreed.

Dubbed the "Lancaster Goat Connection," the first four-page newsletter was printed in early spring. Penn State Cooperative Extension of Lancaster County Extension funded the first newsletter, which was distributed to 200 people. The next issue is in the works for June and plans are to print it quarterly.

A Question and Answer column, a recipe column, goat milk trivia, a goat milk bottle column, and a section to share special goat stories promises to appeal to goat keepers of one or a whole barnfull.

Sharon said, "We hope to bring news about the goat milk and cheese industry, meat goats, pets, pygmys and angora goats."

Although Sharon is editing the newsletter, she will rely upon experts in the field such as Fisher and veterinarians to answer questions and provide information.

"Our purpose is to inform interested people, both goat owners and the public, about goat care, whether it is nutrition, housing, or health," Sharon said. "We will be corresponding with other goat groups, conducting educational programs, holding an annual goat field day and offering other information about goats," she said.

"People who raise meat goats want facts and figures about meat production. Those who raise Angora goats want to know about fiber. We'll include information for novice owners as well as large dairy owners."

Information is printed on such practical topics as how to trim hooves, technical article on such subjects as ketosis, which affects goats similar to toxemia in pregnant women.

Because Oliver collects goat milk bottles and is a member of the Antique Bottle Organization, he writes a few paragraphs about the growing popularity of goat milk bottle collecting. Oliver also writes a monthly column about goat dairies of the past, which is published in the newsletter, "The Milk Route," for the national organization called The National Milk Bottle Collectors Association.

His goat milk bottle collection includes bottles from dairies with interesting histories behind them. One from Onatrue Farm stands for on a true farm. Another from Nunsuch Goat Dairy was a dairy run by Catholic nuns.

The Ogdens have a combination of Nubians, Toggenburgs, Alpines, and Sonnens in their herd, but use a purebred La Mancha buck for breeding purposes.

In between quilting, writing, and many other activities, Sharon finds time to care for her own goat herd. "These are the loves of my life currently living in our barn," she said. The barn where the Ogden raise their mixed herd is one of the oldest in Lancaster County.

"We believe a mixed herd results in stronger and hardier goats if they don't have all the same qualities," Oliver said.

The Ogdens divide goat responsibilities. Oliver takes care of the milking and feeding. During the recent kidding season, Sharon played the role of midwife and delivered 10 kids.

"The first time, the vet talked me through it. I couldn't believe I did it," Sharon said.

Now she has become so adept that she has applied for a midwife license.

She reads goat journals voraciously. Once she read an article on problems with birthing, which covered a breach birth.

When Sharon dealt with an

Working on the computer and writing are two of Sharon Ogden's loves. After writing four quilt books and editing numerous newsletters, Sharon, with the help of Penn State Cooperative Extension and goat breeder Jacob Fisher, has begun the "Lancaster Goat Connection," a quarterly publication for news about goats and goat products.

Mamma Remembers. . . Performs In Period Costume

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

SILVER SPRING (Lancaster Co.) — Dressed in mid-1800's garb, Sharon Ogden portrays a woman of that era as she pulls 16 different quilts from her basket.

Her historical interpretation called "Remembering" is a one-act play that shows the ingenuity, craftsmanship, and artistic talent of women who pieced and stitched the lovely bed covers of the eighteenth century.

In the presentation, Mamma remembers the harsh winters and difficult times. Only four children survive out of the nine who were birthed.

It's a woman's responsibility to sew all the clothing and quilts needed for the family.

Sharon demonstrates how utilitarian the dress she is wears during the presentation was for women. By loosening the belt, the dress expands for an expectant mother. Frugality was practiced. Lace on a worn-out dress was removed and stitched to a new one or onto a slip.

She tells the audience that as a young girl she practiced tiny stitches on a sampler and helped mamma with her quilts.

Her day cap was worn to keep her hair clean since hair was washed only about once a season. She wore a sunpoke bonnet on top of a day cap when going outside.

The variety of quilts that Sharon shows during her 45-minute presentation include antique and replica quilts, coverlets, and samplers. One is a quilt made for her mother, who was two years old at the time. Her mother is now 82 years old.

The antique quilts from that era show the influence of nature and biblical themes. Sharon also says that her name was taken from the biblical book, "Song of Soloman," where it reads: "I am the rose of Sharon, the lily of the valley. . . ."

Sharon said that "Remembering" developed unexpectantly when she accompanied her husband to Antique Tool Collectors meetings. The officers asked her to do a quilting program for the other women who accompanied members to the meetings.

Sharon's interest in quilting was kindled as a girl growing up in New York. Her creative mother encouraged her to try every kind of craft, which she did. After she tried quilting, she was hooked.

She opened a quilt shop "The Gingerbread House," in Farmingdale, N.Y., where she sold fabric and taught quilting for five years. Many of her original patterns have been copyrighted and sold nationally to trade magazines and shops. Sharon lectures and has authored four books: "Double Irish Chain Quilts," "Remembering, A Celebration of Quilting in America," "Irish Chain Quilts," and "Optical Illusions Quilt Designs."

In 1986, Sharon was nominated Quilt Teacher of the Year by Professional Quilter Magazine and is listed in the International Directory of Distinguished Leadership (second edition) for her contributions to the quilt world.

Sharon performs "Remembering" for museums and historical societies in many different states and for women's gatherings.

Her husband Oliver is a hatting historian who also demonstrates at living history museums. Dressed in authentic reproduction costume of the middle 19th centruy , Oliver uses a wide variety of rare hat making tools and equipment to show how hats were made from the rough felt blanks as they were shaped, steamed, and finished into some of the finest of hats.

Oliver received a grant from the Early American Industries Association to write a book about hatters' tools and their uses.

For future details about either Sharon's or Oliver's unique presentations, contact them at P.O. Box 190, Silver Spring, PA 17575 or call (717) 285-3127.

Sharon dresses in authentic period cosutume to portray a woman's life in the mid-1800's by talking about the quilts, samplers, and coverlets from that era.

HOMESTEAD NOTES

Oliver Ogden milks and feeds the goat herd on their Thunder Valley Farm in Silver Spring. Oliver is also a historical hatter who demonstrates the unique craft in living history shows in many states. He also collects goat milk bottles and writes and lectures on the history.

unexpected breach birth in one of the goats, she recalled the instructions for helping in the delivery of a breach birth and remembered to keep the legs bent backward to assist in a healthy delivery.

Most of the Ogden goats are kept to increase the herd, but some are sold at four months of age at an auction.

Oliver said that raising goats can be a lucrative business. While cow's milk averages $14 per hundredweight, goat milk sold for cheese averages $26 per hundredweight. In addition the ethnic market for meat goats continues to grow.

Some of the goat milk is bottle-fed to the kids and the remainder Oliver pasteurizes for he and his wife's use and for friends.

The subscription rate is $5 annually to cover postage and printing for one year. To subcribe, mail your check for $5 to Lancaster Goat Connection, Sharon Ogden, P.O. Box 190, Silver Spring, PA 17575.

Oliver Ogden not only collects goat milk bottles but also researches the history behind the goat dairy.

Nice weather for ducks.

And geese.

So I thought late one recent evening, dragging my rubber barn boot-clad feet through soggy, knee-high grass enroute to the pond. Darkness was rapidly gathering, nudged by the thickening cover of heavy, gray clouds hanging overhead. A few droplets of rain that had begun a bit earlier were multiplying into a steady, bone-chilling drizzle.

Forecast was for yet another night of rain, which would turn the cattle lots even muddier, low spots in the fields standing with yet deeper puddles and the weeds taking over the flower beds with the speed of new Mexico's wildfires enveloping whole mountainsides of brush and pines.

Ironic. If only we could share with those devastated by wildfires our more-than-abundant moisture which has kept the manure truck, the complanter, the tillage equipment parked — the equivalent of equipment twiddling its thumbs when it should be hard at work. Yet, knowing but a few weeks can stand between Swamp City and Dust Bowl conditions, I'm hesitant to complain excessively about the wealth of wet weather.

But, this journey to the pond in the faltering remaining light was not to dwell upon the costly delays being created by the sogginess of this year's busiest time of the farm year. Rather, it was to rejoice in the annual event which makes the pond a favorite destination of spare moments in late spring and early summer.

The Canada goose family was back on the pond.

Four tiny goslings had hatched just days before, little brown and yellow bodies bobbing along the water between their fiercely protective parents. But the parents, or at least one of them, probably had hatched at the pond and grown up here, since they were quite tame. Just a day after the babies had hatched, the goose couple had brought them alongside the pier — where we waited — anticipating a handout.

Then, one day later, I glanced at the pond from the house, saw the goose pair gliding across the pond. And the wide gap of water between the two was empty. A closer look with the binoculars confirmed my dread.

The baby geese had disappeared. Probably a fox, the same sly one that has ripped off several nests of baby guineas over the years and quite a few baby geese as well.

I stood at the back door, binoculars in hand, and fought back an urge to cry. When I relayed the sad news to The Farmer, he promptly headed to the pond, to search for possible evidence to confirm the loss. Not even a feather nor a speak of dusty-colored gosling down could be found.

Maybe it was our own fault, I reasoned. Maybe these "wild" creatures were getting too tame. A heavy-duty guilt trip.

Next morning, The Farmer II arrived to help with chores.

"Hey Mom, are you missing some geese?" he asked. "They're over at our place."

The sunny morning became even brighter.

"We also have baby ducks," he added.

Now, on this drizzly, damp evening, we spot the pair of geese at the far side of the pond. In the vague light, the pond's surface rippled by shimmering reflections, it looks as though the goose pair has babies sheltered between them. Only two? Then, at the lower edge, we spot another pair. With four babies. Two goose families! A duck paddles away in the farthest corner, a tiny convoy of bobbing bodies behind her as well.

Our pond runneth over. And from the weedy edge of the water next to the pier, a deep "kar-uumph" erupts.

Even the bullfrogs sound pleased.

Mildew: A Sign of Summer

Just as sure as summer is on its way so is mildew. The warm, humid conditions of summer days are perfect for growing a thriving crop of this fungus.

It can appear on siding, walls, bathrooms, carpets, shoes and anywhere that there is sufficient food and moisture for growth. Mildew is a form of fungus and although most types are black, some are red, green, or other colors. Mildew spores are almost everywhere. But to grow they need the right conditions.

Its favorite foods include organic materials like paper, leather, natural fibers, or surfaces coated with even the slightest amount of organic matter such as food, grease, soap scum, or soil.

Its favorite temperature is in a range of 77 to 86 degrees Fahrenheit, but some will grow in temperatures as low as 32 degrees or as high as 95 degrees Fahrenheit. Mildew does not require oxygen for growth nor does it need light. In fact, strong sunlight will kill it. To prevent mildew growth, remove the source of moisture, ventilate the area adequately, and dry the air. Without moisture mildew will not grow. The optimal relative humidity range is from 70 to 93 percent. Relative humidity below 70 percent inhibits most mildew growth.

Adequate ventilation will also inhibit mildew growth. Be sure to use bathroom exhaust fans and exterior vented range hood fans, or open windows and doors to exhaust excess steam from the bathroom or kitchen. Clothes dryers should be vented outdoors. During the air conditioning season, windows and doors probably should not be opened at night unless the outside air is at least 15 degrees Fahrenheit lower than inside temperatures. As much as 7 or 8 pints of water can be brought into the house during the night. The next day, the air conditioner would have to work much harder to remove the moisture.

If you have no air conditioner, a dehumidifier can be used. Dampness in the basement is often caused by condensation of warm, moist air on cooler interior wall and floor surfaces. There are three ways to overcome this effect: improve the insulation of the walls, provide heat in the basement, or use a dehumidifier in the basement. If the basement is continually wet from water leaking through cracks in the walls or floor, be sure that outside drainage is adequate.

The procedure for removing mildew depends on the surface on which it is growing. For exterior painted surfaces, scrub with a soft brush and a solution of 1/3 cup detergent, 1 quart household chlorine bleach, and 3 quarts warm water. Use rubber gloves when scrubbing. Then rinse well. The surface can then be treated with a commercial fungicide and, if necessary, repainted with a mildew-resistant paint.

To prevent mildew from growing on siding, be sure there is good air circulation between plantings and the house. At least two feet of air space is recommended between the house and the plantings. Paints such as latex flat paints are the most susceptible to mildew, especially when linseed oil base primer is used.

For interior painted surfaces, scrub mildweed paint or plaster with a solution of 3/4 cup household bleach to 1 gallon of water. Rinse clean with water and allow to dry thoroughly before painting or papering.

For bathroom or basement walls, scrub surfaces with a solution of 1 quart of chlorine bleach, 2 tablespoons of liquid detergent, and 9 quarts of water. An old toothbrush can work well to scrub the grout around the bathroom tile. After letting the surface dry, rinse with plenty of water.

Plastic shower curtains can be washed by machine with chlorine bleach and detergent. Use a warm water rinse for plastics and hang to dry while warm to minimize the wrinkles.

Wood furniture should be vacuumed first. Then clean with a soft cloth dipped in a mild detergent and water solution and wrung almost dry. Work with a small area at a time, rinsing with a cloth dipped in clean water and wrung almost dry.

Dry each area thoroughly before going on to the next area. Keep in mind that water will damage wood if allowed to stay on it. But better than cleaning up the mildew after it occurs is to prevent it by removing the source of moisture. Be sure the area is well ventilated, and that the air is dry. Summer will be more enjoyable if you don't have to keep after the mildew.

Checkoff-Funded Efforts Keep Beef Popular

Magazines and newspapers are rediscovering the appeal beef has with readers, as evidenced by increasing numbers of articles and features appearing nationwide. Much of the publicity is inspired or enhanced through checkoff-funded assistance to publication editors and writers.

A recent article in the April 1996 issue of Country Living symbolizes the editorial return to beef. "Beef is Back," headlined the 8½ -page article. "After a brief fall from grace, beef is again drawing crowds to steak houses, while leaner cuts have reclaimed starring roles at home." With six recipes and four full-page color photographs, the article showcases recipes and meal ideas that encourage consumers to choose beef more frequently. It was made possible by an ongoing, one-on-one relationship between the test kitchen staff of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA) and the food writers at Country Living, which has a circulation of 1.8 million and reach of 4 million readers.

Overall, efforts by the test kitchen staff to place more stories about beef are having tremendous success in 1996. Since Oct. 1, 1995, editorial placement efforts have resulted in 3,669 placements, with a combined circulation of more than 488 million. Last year at this time, 3,092 placements had been made to publications with a similar combined circulation.

"The relationships we've developed with these publications are really helping to generate more great exposure for beef," according to Marlys Bielunski of the NCBAS test kitchens.

Put Some Sizzle In Backyard Barbecues

Grilling is a favorite year-round way to cook, but Memorial Day weekend always seems to find the grill sizzling out the best of meals.

Many seasoned cooks resort to grilling only meats, but a complete meal can easily be prepared on a grill — even bread.

To make your grilling endeavors a success, here are some recipes from our readers and our files. Happy grilling!

TANGY SOY CHICKEN AND PINEAPPLE

20 broiler-fryer chicken breast halves
2 20-ounce cans pineapple slices in unsweetened juice
1 cup fresh lime juice (about 6 limes)
1 cup low-sodium soy sauce
1 tablespoon grated fresh ginger
6 tablespoons cornstarch

Drain juice from pineapple, about 2 cups. In saucepan, mix together pineapple juice, lime juice, soy sauce, and ginger. Place cornstarch in measuring cup and add 6 tablespoons of the juice mixture until smooth. Over high temperature, place saucepan containing juice mixture and bring to a boil. Stir in cornstarch mixture, continuing to stir until sauce is thickened and smooth. Remove from heat and dip each pineapple slice into sauce. Place pineapple in bowl for later use.

Dip each chicken breast half into sauce and place on prepared grill, skin side up, about 8 inches from heat. Place remaining sauce in small saucepan and bring to a boil on stovetop on grill, stirring. Grill chicken, turning and basting with sauce every 10-15 minutes, about 45 minutes or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. While chicken is cooking, place pineapple slices on grill, 1 minute for each side, turning once. Place a pineapple slice on top of each chicken breast and arrange on platter. Top each piece with a teaspoon of sauce. Makes 20 servings.

JALAPENO CHEESEBURGERS

1 pound ground beef
2 teaspoons seeded, chopped jalapeno pepper
1½teaspoon Mexican seasoning
¼ cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese
4 thin tomato slices
4 hamburger buns, split, toasted

In a medium bowl, combine ground beef, jalapeno pepper and Mexican seasoning, mixing lightly but thoroughly. Shape into four ½ -inch patties. Place patties on grid over medium ash-covered coals. Grill uncovered 14 to 16 minutes or until centers are no longer pink, turning once. Approximately one minute before burgers are done, sprinkle each with 1 tablespoon cheese. Place one slice tomato on bottom half of each bun; top with burger. Close sandwiches. 4 servings.

Choosing a Garden Sprayer

Looking for a new sprayer to control pests in the garden? There are many types of sprayers on the market today. Before buying ask yourself these questions:

Is the garden or landscape area small enough to use a manual, hand-held or hose-end sprayer? Who will use the sprayer the most? Do I want a sprayer with replacement parts? What will I use the sprayer for the most? Will I use the sprayer for a few fruit trees or shade trees? Do I want a sprayer light enough to carry? Do I want to attach the sprayer to a garden hose?

These and other questions should narrow down potential sprayers for your small, medium or large garden and/or landscape. For small jobs, a push-pull hand pump, compressed air or garden hose-end sprayer should be adequate. For general outdoor spraying, the compressed air sprayer is preferred.

Choose a sprayer with at least a one-gallon (for larger jobs, choose a 2.5 to 5 gallon) tank with a comfortable pump handle, control value and durable nozzle. Choose a large enough capacity to get the job done without refilling the tank. Ideally, use up the entire pesticide mixture immediately. Do not store pesticides in a sprayer.

The compressed air sprayer requires forcing air into the sprayer by means of a hand pump plunger located on top of the tank. Depending on the type of sprayer you purchase, pressure is maintained by periodic pumping. The sprayer is well suited for spot herbicide treatments.

Sprayers with a nozzle attached to a metal wand work great for treating insects that inhabit the undersides of leaves. Also, injected molded plastic sprayers rather than stainless steel, brass or other metal sprayers are extremely durable, will not corrode and are relatively inexpensive.

For larger gardens, small farms, fruit trees or lawns, the back-pack or knapsack sprayer offers more capacity (2-5 gallons) and interchangeable equipment. Carried on your back, the sprayer operates effortlessly with the pump inside the sprayer and a side-mounted lever. Some types allow for abrasive ingredients like wettable powders while others do not. Check the operating guide before purchasing.

The garden hose pump sprayer uses a concentrated pesticide in an attached container connected to the hose. Care must be taken to prevent the pesticide from siphoning back into the garden hose and into the water source. Antisiphon devices are available to attach to the hose bib of outdoor faucets. Use these sprayers with caution to prevent backflow.

Hose-end sprayers apply a course sprayer pattern often used for lawn applications. Some allow for various dilution rates with greater than 100 gallons of capacity.

For those with very large trees, a power sprayer may be needed. Usually available in 5 to 30 gallon capacities, these sprayers are battery or electric motor or gasoline-driven. Constructed for pulling by a small garden tractor, these sprayers offer optional equipment like a boom with multiple nozzles to spray large lawn or garden areas.

For more information on sprayer calibration, cleaning and small farm sprayer alternatives, contact your Extension Agent or Master Gardener at Penn State Cooperative Extension.

Burger Possibilities

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Burger-lovers really can have it their way with a low-fat hamburger that tastes great.

Food scientists at Ohio State University have developed a filler for lean ground meat to make it taste as good as — or, taste panel members say, even better — than their full-fat equivalents. Now researchers hope that consumers and manufacturers, who have been burned before by lower quality low-fat meat mixtures, will give their product a chance.

"You've got to give consumers something to try that tastes good," said Mike Mangino, professor of food science who, with food science students and professor emeritus Poul Hansen, has developed and tested the filler for ground beef and sausage.

The filler is whey protein, a gel-like substance that holds moisture. Whey protein comes from whey, a byproduct of cheese-making. The whey protein allows a hamburger that's made from 90-percent lean ground beef to have the mouth feel and flavor of a burger with three times the fat.

Whey protein gels at 172-176 F, but cooking hamburger that high would dry it out. The trick, Mangino said, is to heat the whey protein before adding it to the ground beef.

To test the product, Hansen and students in an Ohio State technical problem solving class asked a major fast food retailer to help them conduct a taste test. Low-fat hamburgers were produced at a restaurant by restaurant personnel and served to a panel of restaurant administrators. The panel compared the low-fat burgers to the restaurant's normal full-fat burger without being told which was which. The burgers were the same in every way except fat, water and whey protein content. The results? Every one of the eight-member panel preferred the low-fat burgers and found them higher in acceptability, flavor, appearance and texture.

Even better, the low-fat burger is lower in calories (213 compared with 353) and higher in protein (23.5 grams compared to 19). The low-fat burger contains 54 percent calories from fat, compared with 78 percent in a regular hamburger patty.

Mangino has tested the whey protein in a breakfast sausage product, too.

"I was amazed how easy it was to do it," Mangino said. This time, a student panel gave this product high scores compared with sausage made with the same spices and ingredients, minus the whey protein.

There are, of course, downsides to these low-fat meat products, Mangino said. The first is expense. Whey protein costs between $1.50 to $2 a pound, compared with about 10 cents a pound for fat. Companies interested in selling the product would also have start-up costs associated with any new item.

The second downside is a lack of consumer demand. Just last month, McDonald's announced its discontinuation of McLean Deluxe, a low-fat burger made with carageenan, a seaweed extract, mixed with lean meat. Consumers preferred the restaurant's higher-fat burgers. Mangino said that even though his product tastes better than other low-fat meat fillers, consumers have been burned too often to warm to another product touting the same qualities.

"But if the demand returns, we at least have a product that will give people something to try," Mangino said.

ANSWER — A Reinholds reader wanted to know if dandelion can be frozen. Thanks to Nancy E. Shaffer, Peach Bottom, for writing that she freezes about 20 or more bags a season. Her family loves dandelion and she prepares it in many different ways.

Bring pot of water to a boil. Place cleaned dandelion into boiling water. Blanch dandelion 45 to 60 seconds for a small to medium-size pot and 1 to 1½ minutes for a large pot. The time depends if the greens are young or older. Pick the greens before the flowers bloom. Drain and freeze.

ANSWER — Joyce Shoemaker, Mount Joy, wanted a recipe for wild violet jelly using petals. Thanks to Patricia Wiest, Spring Run, and a faithful Bradford County reader for sending recipes.

Violet Jelly

1½ cups violet flowers
1½ cups water
3 tablespoons lemon juice
3 cups sugar
1 package fruit pectin

Wash violet flowers gently. Put the violets, ¾ cup water, and the lemon juice into your blender; blend at high speed for one minute. Add sugar and blend for another minute.

Stir the pectin into the remaining ¾ cup water and boil for a full two minutes, stirring constantly. Pour this hot mixture into the blender and blend all ingredients for two minutes. Pour into jars and seal. Store in freezer.

No vitamins are lost in this process and you retain the fresh flavor of the violets.

Violet Jelly

1 quart violet blossoms
2½ cups boiling water
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup sugar
1 package pectin

Wash violets and pack tightly into one-quart can. Pour boiling water over them. Let stand to steep, a couple of hours.

Strain into 6-quart saucepan. Press down to remove all juice, discard violets. Add lemon juice, sugar, and pectin to infusion and mix well. Bring to full rolling boil that can't be stirred down. Stir constantly. Boil one minute. Pour into hot jelly glass and seal. Will make 2-3 pints.

½ teaspoon dried rosemary leaves, crushed
1 clove garlic, crushed

Combine pineapple juice, cooking sherry, brown sugar, rosemary, and garlic. Place chops and marinade in plastic bag or shallow dish. Close bag securely or cover dish and marinate in refrigerator overnight, turning pork occasionally.

Remove chops from marinade; reserve marinade. Place chops on rack in broiling pan so surface of meat is 4 to 5 inches from heat. Broil 11 to 13 minutes, turning and basting once with marinade. 4 servings.

Better Kid Care
Field Trips Need To Be Safe

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Kids love to see new and different things, and field trips are great ways for child care providers to meet this need.

These excursions can be as simple as a walk to a near-by park or more elaborate, like a trip to a zoo or a farm. Successful field trips are well planned, and always have safety in mind.

Parents, you should be notified each time a trip or outing away from the child care center or home is scheduled, even if you signed a general permission form when enrolling your child. You need to know where your child is at all times and the type of activities involved. The planned activities should be appropriate for the age of your child.

Ask your child's caregiver if extra help is needed the day of a field trip. If so, see if you can rearrange your schedule and volunteer to help. Kids love it when their parents can come along.

Help your child prepare for the upcoming experience more by talking about it, showing pictures, or reading a story about the type of place to be visited.

Ways to help make field trips safe:

• Extra adults should be along to help. They must pay close attention to the children at all times. If using a vehicle, the driver may not be counted as a helper.

• Take along a first-aid kit and the children's emergency information.

• Review safety rules before leaving and give reminders along the way.

• Children need to be divided into groups and must stay with their group. It's a good idea to put friends together, so they won't be tempted to run over to another group.

• When crossing a street, children and adults must walk slowly and hold hands.

• When going to a large crowded area, each child needs to wear a tag with the name and phone number of the childcare program on it. (For safety reasons, it is best not to include the child's name.)

• The adult in charge of a group must count and keep track of the children in that group frequently, especially after leaving a vehicle and also when returning back to the center or home.

• No child should ever be left alone in a vehicle for any reason!

• When riding in a vehicle, each child under age four must be in an approved car seat and older children need to be secured in a seat belt or booster seat with a seat belt.

Make sure you know what is planned for a field trip and that safety rules are in place. Do not be afraid to ask questions. Most of all, if you do not feel comfortable with the plans, make other arrangements for your child that day.

Barn Chores For Josiah

Nine-year-old Josiah Becker wrote this essay for a school assignment. His third-grade teacher at Bainbridge Elementary School sent a copy to us.

We think you will enjoy a glimpse into the life of a 9-year-old farm boy as much as we did.

Josiah is the son or Marlin and Doreen Becker who farm 200 acres in Elizabethtown and milk 55 Holsteins. Josiah has a sister, Kimberli, 7, and a brother, Christian, 2.

The Barn Chores
Josiah Becker

When I get off the bus, I need to go in the house to get ready to go out to the barn.

Sometimes I have a snack first. I usually eat graham crackers or pretzels.

Now it is time to go out to the barn. I put on my boots and rubbers and fly out the door.

When I get in the barn, I go over to the third stable. We have six milkers. But we just use five when we do the third stable. The reason is because we have ten cows in that stable and we milk every other cow at a time. So when the third cow is about done then we wash the second cow.

We wash the cows so we can get the dirt off of their teets. Even if they aren't dirty, we still wash them. We wash them with some teet dip spray and telephone papers.

When we are all done milking the cows we teet dip them. We teet dip the cows so no dirt gets in their teets. Then, when about 25 cows are done, my dad and I go out in the barnyard to put the heifers in. Then Mark and I let out all of the cows that are teet dipped.

After all the cows are out, we divide them into two places. Some at the feeder and some in the top two free stalls.

Then we open the gates and chase the rest of the cows in the barn. After all the cows are in the barn Mark and I tie the cows. Then we wash some cows and put the milkers on while I scrape the barn.

After a while, I climb up the haystack and throw down about 6 bales of straw and about 2 bales of hay. There are about 10 kittens in the haystack. Most of them do not like me. I take one bale of straw to the hog shed. I take the ropes off and then bed it around. Then I take 2 bales down below the hog shed. They are bigger calves.

Sometimes I take 1 bale up to the calf hutches and sometimes I take a bale down to the calves near the silo.

After all the cows are done milking, we teet dip the cows and let them out. Some of the cows need to stay in the barn. Some of the cows get pills like asprin and vitamins.

Then, after Mark left and all the milkers are washed, I scrape the barn. Then I shut the gate and turn out the light.

Josiah carries a straw bale to scatter in the calf pens.

Before milking the cows, Josiah washes the teets.

After the barn chores are finished and supper eaten, Josiah plays his favorite tune, "Foggy Mountain Breakdown," on his banjo. Josiah has taken banjo lessons for three years and has performed in his school musical, local talent competitions, and for church and family gatherings. Josiah also enjoys reading, playing sports, drawing, and writing.

Barn chores often includes bottle feeding calves.

Slow Cooker Safety

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — Slow cookers are often used by food handlers at fairs and church suppers to keep foods like sloppy joes, meatballs, and chili heated for serving. Slow cookers cook foods at low temperatures (between 170 degrees and 280 degrees F) but are considered safe since the direct heat from the pot, lenthy cooking, and steam created within the tightly-covered container combine to destroy bacteria.

If you use slow cookers, keep these safety tips in mind:

• Keep perishable foods like meat and vegetables refrigerated until placing in the cooker.

• Always defrost meat or poultry before putting it into a slow cooker.

• Cut food like roasts and whole chickens into small pieces before placing in the cooker. The smaller sections will cook faster ensuring thorough cooking.

• Fill the cooker no less than half full and no more than two-thirds full.

Fresh And Dried Herbs For Profit

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

EVERETT (Bedford Co.) — Sixteen separate rural income opportunities were discussed at a special seminar held at the Everett Area Junior-Senior High School recently.

Sponsored by the Penn State Cooperative Extension, the Maryland Cooperative Extension Service, Saint Francis College Small Business Development Center, the West Virginia University Cooperative Extension Service; and the Virginia Cooperative Extension Service, subjects ranged from farm vacations to domesticating wild animals.

Speaking on "Fresh and Dried Herbs for Profit," was Maureen Rogers, director of Herb Growing & Marketing Network in Silver Spring.

It was a well-attended session with interests varying from growing herbs for personal use to that of Ramona Jablonski of Baltimore, Maryland, who said, "We have property in Illinois. It's a working farm, but I don't know how long it can remain that way and I'm getting ideas for ways to put the land to use."

Another couple, Roe and Helen Herb (That's right, herbs at a herb workshop) of Butler, had similar ideas. "We've not had dairy cattle since the children left home," said Helen. "We do raise some beef cattle, but we are looking for other ways to increase our income."

"Herbs are an up and coming industry," said Ms. Rogers. "But, you have to market just as you do any other type of alternative farm income."

"The ornamental market is a dead-end one. Don't expect to raise dried flowers for much more than your own enjoyment."

"Like it or not," Martha Stewart calls many of the shots. "Whatever she says is what is going to be in demand."

"Today," Ms. Rogers continued, "Herbs are being grown for medicinal and culinary purposes. But, unless you live in an area where there are a lot of four or five star restaurants, forget selling directly. Chefs are not as intelligent as we think."

"The FDA monitors all herbs grown for medicinal purposes so this can also be difficult."

"Herb plants are the best way to make a profit," emphasized the speaker. "Everyone wants to grow herbs, but most people will kill them off or they freeze out over winter."

"Baby Boomers who are enthralled with 'staying alive,' have been a great herb market source."

Maureen noted that purple coneflower, which is a weed, is in great demand. "It could be grown almost anywhere," she said.

"Golden Seal which has a mystique about it, is in short supply. Last year the price went from $36 for ½ pound to $65 almost overnight because the supply dried up."

The demand for culinary herbs has grown along with a health-conscious populace. "They are cutting the fat out of diets and replacing them with the taste of herbs."

Gingko which grows on a tree, has been the success of one southern plantation. Gingko is in demand for Alzheimer research.

Cat's Claw is being used for all types of arthritis. "The beauty industry is buying herbs at a rapid rate and they have to come from somewhere. Mary Kay is adding rosemary to some of its face creams. I could use 1,000 tons of rosemary a month and don't know where to get it."

As a herb broker, Maureen says buyers would prefer to buy within the United States but sometimes it is impossible."

"I had a call for 1,000 pounds of basil in February," she said. "Tell me, where do you get 1,000 pounds of any herb in that month!"

Ms. Rogers cautioned those interested in growing herbs to get all of the knowledge possible.

"Read books, attend seminars, or take a course," she advised. Perdue University offers an extensive course in growing and marketing herbs. Cost is in the $1,400 to $1,800 range plus room and board but, according to Rogers, is worth every penny.

"The sad thing is that 80 percent of those attending are from outside the country," the speaker noted.

When marketing herbs, check out the competition, join a trade association, and never limit yourself.

Slow Cookers

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — A slow cooker can provide hot, nourishing meals on cold winter days. Because heat is direct and is combined with steam within a tightly covered container, the slow cooker does a better job of killing disease-causing microbes than does long-time, low-temperature cooking in a conventional oven. Still, be sure everything is clean — the cooker, utensils, work area and your hands! Choose recipes with a high moisture content for preparation in the slow cooker. These could include chili, soup, stew and spaghetti sauce. Cut food into chunks or small pieces to ensure thorough cooking. It's best not to use the slow cooker for larger pieces, such as roasts or whole chickens, because the food will cook so slowly that it could remain in the bacterial danger zone too long. Fill the slow cooker no more than two-thirds full. Heat may not adequately penetrate to all parts of the food if the container is too full.

Five Generations Carry Grain Dust In The Blood

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

BRODBECKS (York Co.) — In some ways, not much has changed at the G.S. Snyder and Son Feed Mill.

Every day, the sound of grain being ground into feed echos off the mill's solid, sturdy walls. Supplies like rodent bait and tomato dust line the shelves in the office. Trains pass by just a few yards from the mill's front steps, the engines' whistles periodically piercing the quiet of this placid rural village.

And, as they have for five decades, farmers stop by to order feed, to deliver grain, and to trade good-natured jibes with owner Gordon Snyder.

Snyder joined his father, Paul, in operating the Brodbecks landmark in January, 1946, after returning home from a three-year stint with the Air Corps during World War II. He is the fourth generation of family millers at the site, and grew up as he says, "with grain dust in my blood."

"I used to ride with the salesmen when I was a kid," he relates of his appreciation of getting out and meeting with the mill's customers.

Emanuel Heindel opened a sawmill business on the site in 1864, later diversifying into grinding flour and grain with the water-powered mill. In 1890, following a heavy storm, Heindel walked up to the train tracks to check a dam for the mill's water impoundment and was killed by an oncoming train. His son-in-law, Titus Snyder stepped in to keep the mill running, continuing the flour grinding business and expanding into sales of feeds and byproducts. Succeeding Titus in operating the mill was his son Paul.

Less than two years after Gordon joined his father in running the family mill, Paul died, leaving Gordon, his wife Romaine, and their four children to carry on the Snyder feed firm tradition.

"A lot of things have changed since then," chuckles Snyder, reminiscing about the rapid progress in agriculture. One giant step toward technology came when electricity replaced water for powering the mill.

Though it was difficult to obtain trucks following the war, the mill did manage to acquire a vehicle for deliveries. Before long, three customer routes were being run weekly, delivering to farmers bags of the custom mixes they had ordered for their livestock and poultry uses. While Snyder's feed and commodity purchases were once delivered to them strictly by rail, that, too, changed as trucks became a more cost effective hauling system.

"The feed business was starting to get a little more sophisticated," says Snyder. "Forage was a real focus then; and now we're again seeing an increased emphasis on forages and grazing."

Rather then develop his own brand of feed mix, Snyder has handled a line that has sold as various brands over the years, as firms have bought, sold and merged. When he began his career at the mill, the brand name was Larro, later changing to Ful-O-Pep. Then came Eshelman, Wayne, Beacon; now G.S. Snyder and Son handles Nutrena feeds.

"We were young and ambitious back in those days," relates Snyder of a move in the 1950s toward diversification. They began offering broiler raising on contracts, with the mill supplying the feed and guaranteeing a price for the growers. Later, houses for raising pullets for laying operations were added, working closely with the Lancaster County poultry firm of Hubbard Farms. At peak production, Snyder's contract pullet operation includes about 140,000 birds.

"Then the kids started to leave for college and I lost my help," Snyder quips. The couple's four children were a vital part of the poultry team, helping to vaccinate and debeak the young birds, then returning to the houses to help catch and load when flocks were marketed.

A grain dryer and bins were added to the facility in the 1960s, with grain bank services for the mill's customers and an increasing trend toward more bulk handling of commodities. Today, about 70 percent of the mill's business is in bulk, with dairy feeds the primarily volume product, and lesser amounts of beef and horse feed.

"We work more today on 'focus' rations, coordinating, and customizing feeds to the farmers' forages. We have nutritionists that help us in balancing our customers' specific needs," he explains.

Just as feed ration balancing has become more scientific and specialized, the handling of farm supplies by smaller mills is, in Snyder's description "a gone business." Instead, many of his customers now purchase their livestock medications and supplies from route operators or mail order, where bulk buying offers more competitive pricing. Seeds and fertilizers are also mainly purchased by farmers in bulk volumes.

And if the feed business is changing, Snyder is quick to point out that agriculture itself is in constant flux.

"The small farmers are going out," Snyder says, recalling the days when a herd of 10 dairy cows was considered big and every farm raised a little of everything. "Those remaining are becoming more market-oriented, more technical, more detailed, more specialized. Farming is a big business, not just a way of life anymore.

"And there aren't as many young farmers," adds Romaine.

Total number of mill customers, however, is holding. A steady flow of suburbanites moving onto small acreages in southwestern York County, tending a few horses or sheep or goats, continues to bring new faces into the Brodbecks landmark.

One of the most dramatic and rapid changes Gordon Snyder has seen is the rapid escalation of commodity prices over the last several months.

"I've never seen anything this drastic," he states. "These prices are created by cheap American dollars. Corn is up 74 percent over what it was last year. Barley has more than doubled. I think these prices are going to hold. If we have a dry year, I don't know what farmers will do for feed."

In a telling price comparison, Gordon and Romaine Snyder pulled out some of their 1947 feed and grain invoices. Dairy feed, 24 percent protein, sold for $91.30 per ton. Cottonseed meal was $52.90/T. Chick builder was $5.45 per hundred pounds. For a ton of 3-12-6 corn fertilizer, farmers paid $41, minus a possible discount. Oats were $1.35 per hundred, or about 45-cents per bushel. Wheat was $2.17 per bushel. And if you heated with coal, your bill was $10.85 for every ton shoveled into your furnace.

And, though ag prices and trends have greatly changed, one agriculture basic has not, according to Gordon Snyder.

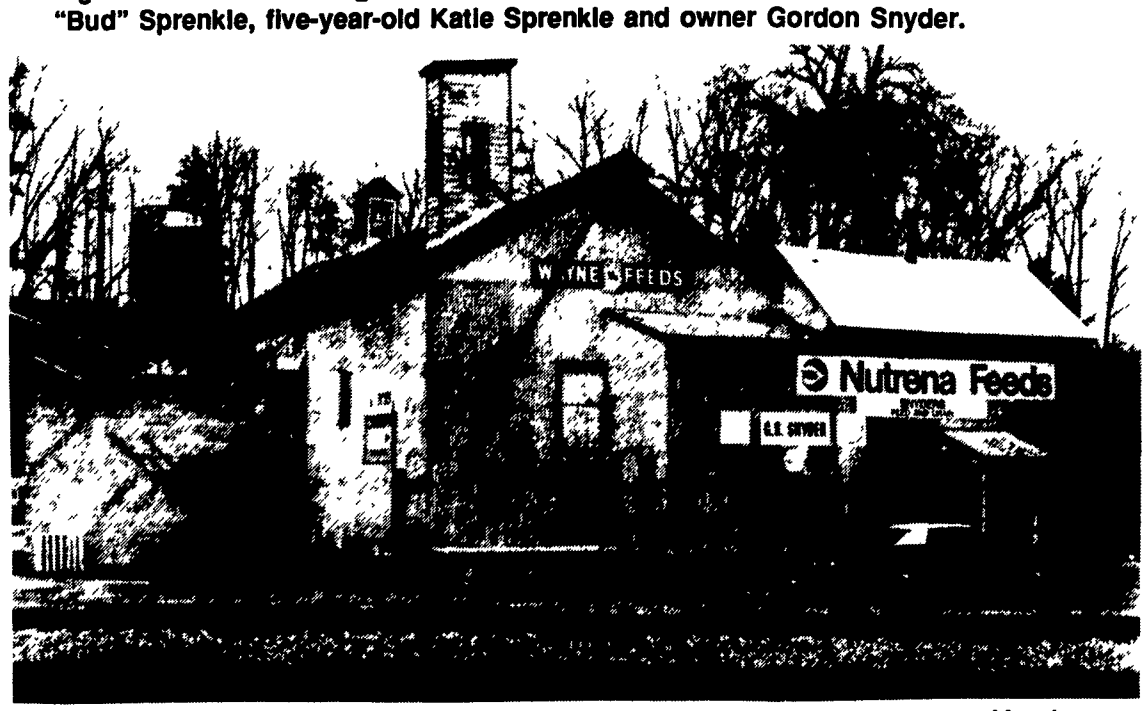
"Farm people haven't changed — they're still the best people on earth to do business with," he says with a wide smile. "With what farmers have had to deal with over the years, you'd think they'd be the grouchiest people around. But they're not; they're optimists."

In 1979, a fifth-generation Snyder "came home" to the Brodbecks feed mill. Karles Snyder, who had "helped as a kid and liked it," left his accounting job to fill a vacancy at the mill. Karles quips that he continued to help during busy periods even while working elsewhere following college, so he really never left.

Earlier this year, despite extremely bad weather, nearly 150 of his long-time customers and friends turned out for a 50th anniversary celebration at the York County 4-H Center. They shared memories, pored over old bills and photographs and presented the Snyders with some hand-made commemorative gifts.

"I like this business, and I like the people. Otherwise, I wouldn't be in it," affirms Snyder.

The cozy, old office of the G.S. Snyder and Son feed mill is a favorite spot for trading stories between long-time friends and feed customers. From left are Donald "Bud" Sprenkle, five-year-old Katie Sprenkle and owner Gordon Snyder.



A local landmark, the historic feed company at Brodbecks is now operated by the fourth and fifth generations of the founding family of saw and grain millers.

Save With Credit Cards

RUTGERS, N.J. — There are certain areas regarding credit card usage that many consumers are in the dark about. Understanding them will help keep more money in your pocket than in the credit card company's coffers.

• Interest rates and annual fees are often negotiable. The credit card companies know you are bombarded with lots of other offers. This information can be used to your advantage. If you are paying 16-18% interest, ask them to lower your rate. If you don't ask, you don't get. Many will lower your rate 2% or more. If they say no, there are plenty of low-rate or no-annual-fee to take your business.

• If your credit card is lost or stolen you are liable for the first $50 of unauthorized use — as long as you report the disputed charges within 60 days in writing. Read over your monthly statements to monitor for charges that may not be yours.

• You may think you have a 25 day grace period — maybe not. If you do not pay the entire bill in full, your grace period is gone. You'll pay interest on new purchases from the day of purchase.

• Less is more when it comes to credit cards. Too many cards can actually hurt your credit record. A gasoline and two major credit cards should be plenty.

• When calculating interest credit cards are not all alike. Most credit cards use the average daily balance method (Discover Card is one) which calculates interest by adding the average daily balances for the current and previous months. (This is very expensive). If you use a card using this method, pay off the bill in full each month. The most consumer friendly method for calculating interest is the adjusted daily balance method which deducts your payments before calculating fees.

• If you only pay the minimum required, you go deeper into debt. Pay as much as you can and as early in the billing cycle if you are not paying in full to help lower finance costs.

• The use of a "convenience" check is not equal to using your credit card. Credit card companies often will send you convenience checks to encourage you to write against your credit line, particularly at holiday time. Usually, interest accrues immediately (no grace period) and the interest charge is based on the cash-advance rate which is most often at a rate higher than what is charged on purchases.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

Usually I'm not at a loss for words, but the other week I lost my voice completely. I could barely whisper and within five days I was to be the liturgist in our church. So I read and reread the chapter that I was to read aloud and hoped for the best. In fact I was so intent on whether or not my voice would come back that I completely forgot that I also had to give two prayers. Not until almost the moment of my rising and speaking did I remember. So,I had to improvise as I had not planned ahead. It was an anxious moment.

Due to our wet weather, we have an ample supply of rhubarb. In fact, I have so much that I've been sharing with my neighbors. The price in the local grocery store was 50 cents a stalk. At that rate the 40 stalks I pulled to freeze would have been worth twenty dollars. However,. I know that they barely pay half of that price If I try to sell it to them.

My sister gave us a few roots three years ago and I think they all grew. Now she is moving and Ill share some with her. One neighbor made a pie and another tried to make sauce like her mother made. It was very easy to freeze as it does not need to be blanched like other vegetables.

Do you like water cress? If you do you ought to try growing some garden cress. It is a good substitute and can be harvested in 10 to 14 days. It can be cut and recut as it grows back. I usually let some plants give seed heads and therefore have new seed for the next year.

Long ago a relative gave me some scallions that can be planted in the garden and then forgotten. They have small onions at the top of their stems in the summer. These fall to the ground and replant themselves, Then in March they are ready to pull and eat as green onions. Now that is the kind of vegetable I like—one that tends itself.

Cook's Question Corner

ANSWER — Ike Rueker, Smithville, N.J., wanted a recipe for old-fashioned English toffee candy coated with chocolate and sprinkled with nuts. Thanks to Anne Rapp, Holmdel, N.J.; Mrs. Jack Sullivan, Dundee, N.Y.; Sue McKinsey, Windsor; Brenda Oberholtzer, and others for sending recipes that sound scrumptious. Unfortunately, we don't have room to print them all.

Lucy's English Toffee Candy

2 cups sugar
½ cup water
¼ cup light corn
1 cup butter
1¾ cups chopped almonds or cashews
1 small bag chocolate chips (semi-sweet or milk chocolate)
1 cup chopped walnuts

Bring first five ingredients to a boil in a large saucepan. Lower heat and cook to hard crack stage (300-350). Spread on well-greased pan or platter. Spread chocolate chips over top of toffee while it is still warm. Let set until chips are soft and then spread to cover surface with the chocolate, sprinkle with the chopped waluts and press them into the chocolate. When cool, break into pieces. Store tightly covered, away from heat.

Ann's English Toffee

3 cups sliced natural almonds
1 cup sugar
1 cup butter
1¾ cups semi-sweet chocolate pieces, melted

Spread almonds in a single layer in shallow pan. Place on center rack in cold oven, toast at 350 degrees for 9-11 minutes, stirring occasionally until lightly toasted; cool. Cook sugar and butter in heavy saucepan over medium-high heat, stirring constantly until thermometer registers 240 degrees.

Stir in one cup of almonds, stirring constantly until thermometer registers 290 degrees. Remove from heat and spread on buttered cookie sheet to ¼ -inch thickness. Spread half the melted chocolate over the surface and sprinkle with another cup of almonds. Press into chocolate. Let cool until chocolate hardens. Turn candy over, score surface with fork and top with remaining chocolate and almonds. Let harden and break into bite-size pieces. Store in cool place in airtight container. Makes 1-1½ pounds.

Farmers Union Leader, President Meet On Farm Issues

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Farmers Union President Robert Junk met with President Bill Clinton recently in State College to discuss farm issues and other matters. Clinton was in Pennsylvania to give the commencement address at Penn State University's graduate school.

President Clinton told Junk that he is concerned with the volatility in farming and he assured the farm leader that the Clinton Administration is committed to fixing the recently enacted farm bill next year.

"The President is very engaged in farming issues," Junk said after the meeting. "He said that the high grain prices we see now are temporary and that the new farm bill doesn't address the future when farm prices are likely to go down."

Junk expressed to the president the need for farmers to have a final say in new conservation programs in the farm bill recently signed by President Clinton. The U.S. Department of Agriculture is writing the regulations to implement new conservation programs. Pennsylvania Farmers Union supports the use of elected Farm Service Agency county committees as the final arbiter in administering agriculture conservation programs.

"I just told the president it's important that farmers have oversight in the conservation programs," Junk said. "Farmers have the practical knowledge and experience to make the programs work. Farmers have to live with environmental decisions. They're in the best position to know the problems and how to solve them."

Junk also urged President Clinton to take a good look at the proposed merger between the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific railroads. The National Farmers Union recently sent a letter to Congress opposing the merger because it would hurt farmers and consumers by setting up a virtual railroad monopoly in many parts of the country.

During their discussions, Junk gave the president a letter listing concerns related to the proposed merger. The letter urged the president to explore alternative approaches to the UP/SP merger, including the divestiture of lines in the SP East region, so that an open bidding process for our nation's rails can occur.

According to the union, that option is especially important to Pennsylvania farmers, where Philadelphia-based Conrail has offered to buy the SP East region rail lines as an alternative to the tracks Union Pacific would control between Chicago and Mexico. Such a development would open up new links for shipping products to and from the Northeast to markets west and south.

"This is a consumer issue. The problem with this railroad merger is that again the consumer will be the big loser. With fewer railroads hauling farm products, shipping prices are sure to go up for farmers. That price hike will show up in the grocery store down the line," Junk said.

THINK CONCRETE WHEN PLANNING YOUR FEED STORAGE!!

"This is the kind of silo you need to protect your valuable feed."

"HOW WILL YOU BE STORING YOUR VALUABLE FORAGES AND GRAINS IN THE 21st CENTURY?"

It's not too early to begin planning your storage and feeding systems for the year 2000 and beyond.

As margins narrow, dairymen need to invest in efficiency: this can have as great an influence on PROFIT as milk price changes.

Protect your valuable feeds from the elements... increase the efficiency of your feeds, your animals, and your labor.

The Building you want. The Lease you need.

Whether your new farm or commercial building is of pole, timber column, stud, steel or block construction; choose Telmark lease financing.

Telmark has been leasing equipment for over 30 years. Did you know that we've been leasing new buildings for that long too? Consider the features:

- Tax deductibility and accelerated write-offs: Lease payments are income tax deductible over the term of the lease compared to 20-year depreciation of farm buildings and 39-year depreciation of commercial buildings. Could reduce tax liability this year.
- Low upfront costs: Beginning costs may be as little as one monthly lease payment.
- Flexible lease term: Building lease terms start aggressively at five years but may be as long as ten, twelve, or fifteen years.
- Customized payment schedules: Lease payment schedules match your cash flow. Payment options include monthly, quarterly, annually, as well as, skip or specially designed seasonal payments.

How do you start leasing a building from Telmark? Talk with a qualified builder to determine your needs and building cost. And call your Telmark representative:

IN ALUMINUM BODIES
EBY BUILDS IT

M.H. Eby custom-builds aluminum truck bodies for the agri-transportation market. Nobody offers more sizes and options in:

- FLATBED BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of 5 widths.
- GRAIN BODIES - Lengths to 24', landscape and general purpose dumps to 12'.
- LANDSCAPE BODIES - Lengths to 12', We'll build to your specs!

For greater payload capacity, Eby's aluminum design is equal in strength to steel and up to 40% lighter. Our corrosion-resistant components never need painting. That means minimum maintenance, improved appearance and higher resale value.

Eby products have superior standard features. And we offer customer options for virtually any application. Agriculture is your business - building bodies to haul it is ours.

now a "truly great" claw has gotten even better

You've already heard about the Flo-Star® Claw. How its unique design allows milk to flow smoothly and quickly away from the teats. How it reduces the risk of intra-unit transfer of mastitis organisms. How it's constructed to move large amounts of milk quickly, so it can easily handle even your highest producing cows. How it protects the high quality of your milk by minimizing splashing and agitation within the claw. How it locks-in your profits.

But, what you might not know is that Bou-Matic has redesigned the Flo-Star Claw to make it fit a wider variety of udder shapes. To make it easier on your deep uddered cows. To make it more durable. In short, to make the Flo-Star even better.

Introducing the Flo-Star Classic from Bou-Matic. An excellent claw based on the innovation of a truly great one.

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio — Effective June 1, Michael Hurst is to join the headquarters staff of the American Jersey Cattle Association as director of field service.

In his new position, Hurst will be coordinating the appraisal program and field service. In addition, he will provide assistance in international marketing and with the All American.

Hurst has been the AJCA Southeast field representative serving Delaware, Kentucky, Maryland, New Jersey, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia since Sept. 1, 1994. During this time, Micheal conducted several appraisal schedules, including appraising Jerseys in Costa Rica. In addition he has assisted with projects in the office including the new Jersey Genetic Summary.

Hurst has a master's degree in animal breeding and management, along with a bachelor's degree in dairy science from The Ohio State University.

Study: Wildlife Costs Ohio Farmers $46 Million

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Ohio farmers believe wildlife damage costs them money, but most think the benefits of wildlife outweigh the losses, said an Ohio State University agricultural economist.

Lynn Forster and other Ohio State researchers asked nearly 4,000 Ohio farmers to assess the impact of wildlife on their operations. The survey showed that in 1995 wild animals caused, on average, about $650 worth of damage per farm, for an annual loss to all Ohio farmers of $46.4 million.

Wildlife damage hurts yields and crop quality, and increases costs. Farmers buy devices to scare away wildlife and must repair damaged structures, Forster said.

The annual losses from animal wildlife for the average farm are about $3 per acre, or 1 percent of gross income.

"The averages are deceiving," Forster said. "A 1 percent loss of gross sales isn't that much, but some farmers in certain geographical areas are getting severe damage."

Financial losses in relation to gross income are highest in southern and southeastern Ohio, where farm production is the least and wildlife populations are high, Forster said. For example, in Harrison County, wildlife damage is estimated at nearly 8 percent of gross income. In Guernsey, Hocking, Jefferson, Morgan, Muskingum, Perry and Richland counties, the study showed losses of 4 percent to 6 percent.

On the other hand, in the north and western areas of the state, where grain crops dominate, estimated damage generally is less than 1 percent of income.

Financial losses also vary by type of farm. Fruit growers estimated 11 percent loss of gross income, and Christmas tree growers, 6 percent. Losses on crop and livestock farms are judged at less than 1 percent.

Survey respondents attributed nearly half of all farm financial losses from wildlife to deer. Deer injure fruit trees by eating twig ends and leaves.

"Apple trees are like ice cream to deer; they really prefer them," said Tom Townsend, Ohio State wildlife management specialist. "But once trees get above the height where deer can browse, the trees usually do well."

Male deer also harm fruit trees with their antlers. This typically occurs in the fall when males polish the itchy velvet from their antlers by scraping them against trees. This damage looks awful and yield will usually suffer, but most trees survive, Townsend said.

Deer can cost grain and livestock farmers by eating and trampling crops or grasses, Forster said.

Groundhogs and raccoons also are thought to be nuisances. Farm equipment can be damaged by running into holes and dirt piles created by groundhogs, Townsend said. Raccoons also reduce yields, because they will eat almost anything.

In addition to these species, birds were blamed for sizable losses by fruit and vegetable growers, and rabbits by nursery and Christmas tree growers. Farmers should consider methods of controlling wildlife part of the expense of production, Townsend said. Most damage can be avoided with the proper measures.

A majority of farmers believe damage from wild animals has increased over the past five years, perhaps because of a rise in Ohio's deer population, Forster said.

However, most farmers, even those with the greatest financial loss, think of wildlife as a resource or source of pleasure rather than a pest. In fact, 35 percent of the respondents reported they voluntarily do things to promote wildlife populations, such as leaving cover or unharvested crops for food, Forster said.

Century Of Service

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Old Guard Insurance Group is celebrating its 100th Anniversary in 1996, according to David E. Hosler, president and chief executive officer of the company.

Old Guard was founed in 1896 by nine Lancaster County business people and farmowners as a mutual insurance company to protect their farms and dwellings from fire and storm damage. Today, the company offers a wide variety of insurance plans, including a diverse line of property and casualty insurance to personal and commercial insurance buyers through Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Delaware.

"This year, in commemoration of our 100th Anniversary, we want to thank our local communities for helping us remain a strong organization. As is our tradition, we will continue to match our agents' contributions to their local volunteer fire companies. By supporting volunteer fire companies and strengthening their ability to protect the public welfare, we hope our customers will be spared the consquences of serious fire loss. Prevention is the best insurance," said Hosler.

"Old Guard has maintained its leadership in insuring and serving the agricultural community through the innovation and development of new products, services, and markets," said Hosler. In November 1994, Old Guard was recognized by SmartMoney Magazine as a leading rural insurance specialist that offers attractive rates to rural property owners.

Round Baler Special For Silage

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The New Holland Model 644 Silage Special round baler is a superior baler for dry crops, but has unique features that make it even better for material baled between 50 and 65 percent moisture for silage.

Bales are formed by a combination of rolls and belts. The front rolls pivot to provide a large core-forming area. Bale weight is largely supported by the floor roll as the bale forms.

Sealed in plastic, the 1,300-pound 4x5-foot bales preserve quality crops as palatable, very digestible, high-protein silage, said New Holland product management. A new, optional Bale-Slice™ system uses retractable knives to slice the bale after the core is formed. The knives retract just before wrapping begins. Slicing the crop allows firm packing and easier feeding. The internal slicing action speeds ration making when bales are processed in the new TMR mixer-feeders designed for round hay and silage bales.

The New Holland Model 644 Silage Special round baler is designed for the additional weight and stress of baling high-moisture crops. Twine or net wrap options are offered. The optional Bale Slice™ system features a series of knives in the starter roll that slice the bale as it forms. The knives retract just before wrapping begins. The internal slicing makes bales easier to feed or process in TMR mixer-feeders.

New Holland engineers designed the 644 Silage Special for best performance in the widest range of conditions, the company said. The machine has a two-position stuffer to accommodate both drier and high-moisture crops. Stuffer tines are steel-welded teeth for smooth feeding action in tough, heavy crops.

A wide pickup makes it easier to fill bales end to end for improved shape and density. The pickup tines are closely-spaced for best performance picking up from either unraked, wide mower-conditioner swaths or windrows. The sledge follower roll and tailgate nose roll have welded steel loops and heavy-duty, sharpened scrapers to avoid gummy crop residue buildup. Unlike fixed-chamber balers, the Model 644 Silage Special variable chamber bale forming lets operators choose any bale diameter. Wide tires and a reinforced axle are designed to carry the additional weight of heavy silage bales.

The 644 Silage Special is available with Auto-Wrap™ twine or Fastnet™ wrap with plastic netting.

Wonsidler Recognized By Agco Allis

ATLANTA, Ga. — Charlie Wonsidler of C.J. Wonsidler Brothers, Quakertown, Pa., was recently recognized for outstanding sales performance in 1995 by Agco Corporation.

As one of the company's top performers in farm equipment sales, Wonsidler was invited to attend Agco's annual dealer conference in Orlando, Fla. Only 400 of the more than 7,000 Agco dealers from around the world were invited to join this elite group.

Ag Driver Earns Award

BROGUE (York Co.) — A truck rodeo was recently held for custom applicators in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, and Maryland by Lebanon Agricolp. Carl Swope of Brogue finished the day in his 1994 GMC spray truck as the overall winner.

He was scored on six categories — safely loading his truck with a prescribed mix of water and limitation pesticides, safety inspection of his equipment, applying a prescribed amount of water in an exactly measured area, drift control around obstacles placed in the field, a test of consistency in nozzle rate across the width of the boom, and written test of rules and regulations. Applicants were given scores of 0 in each category that they were more than 4.5 percent off — not much room for error.

Another York countian, Brian Ziegler, York, finished a close 2nd in the post-emergence division of the competition in his 1994 Patriot by Tyler.

Dekalb Targets Production Plant Upgrades

DEKALB, Ill. — Responding to their expanding seed business and their corporate goal of improving the reliability and quality of their seed products, Dekalb has announced an ambitious five-year capital improvement program.

Nate McGuire, Dekalb's vice president of operations, said the company will invest more than $10 million in this program's first year alone.

"With demand increasing for Dekalb seed, many of our plants are operating above their designed capacity," said McGuire, adding, "To meet current demand and future growth goals, our facilities and equipment will be modernized with the latest technology in seed conditioning equipment to improve seed quality and plant productivity."

While Dekalb is increasing the seed production quality and capacity, they are also expanding irrigated seed acreage planting.

Plants slated for upgrading include:

• Kearney, Neb. — The improvements at Dekalb's Kearney corn seed plant include nearly $3.5 million for new seed dryers and storage for seed awaiting conditioning.

• Waterman, Ill. — Improvements at Dekalb's Waterman corn seed plant include nearly $1.2 million for conversion to husk-on harvesting and new truck scales.

• Tuscola, Ill. — The improvements at Dekalb's Tuscola corn seed plant include nearly $300,000 for a new climate controlled seed warehouse.

• Illiopolis, Ill. — Improvements at Dekalb's Illiopolis corn seed plant include nearly $300,000 for a new automated packaging system.

• Grinnel, Iowa — Improvements at Dekalb's Grinnell, Iowa, corn seed plant include more than $1.5 million for converstion to husk-on harvesting.

• Boone, Iowa — Improvements at Dekalb's Boone, Iowa, corn seed plant include nearly $1 million for conversion to husk-on harvesting.

• Crawfordsville, Ind. — Improvements at Dekalb's Crawfordsville corn seed plant include nearly $400,000 for a climate controlled seed warehouse.

• Redwood Falls, Minn. — Improvements at Dekalb's Redwood Falls soybean seed plant include nearly $475,000 for state-of-the-art seed conditioning equipment aimed at improving seed quality.

• Olivia, Minn. — Dekalb's recently acquired Olivia soybean seed plant will undergo nearly $250,000 of improvements to bring the facility up to Dekalb's quality and capacity standards.

Chapman Joins White Oak Mills

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster County) — White Oak Mills has announced the addition of John Chapman, Manheim, as vice president of pork production.

With more than 20 years of swine production experience, Chapman is responsible for overseeing White Oak's entire pork production division. His new responsibilities include supervising production personnel, making routine facility visits, and overseeing hog placement and transportation.

In addition, Chapman will manage the pork production's record-keeping system and genetics programs. Serving as a liasison and establishing regular communication between Wagner Enterprises contract producers and the company, he also will implement cost- and quality-control strategies while assisting with the expansion of contract operations.

A graduate of Mobridge High School, Mobridge, S.D., Chapman continued his education in Elizabethtown College part-time for two years and earned an accounting certificate.

He was employed as a financial analyst and manager of integrated pork production at Pennfield Corporation for the past eight years and worked at White Oak Mills as vice president, sales and marketing from 1983 to 1987.

Northrup King Receives Experimental Use Permit

GOLDEN, Minn. — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) approved an 8,400-acre experimental use permit (EUP), which allows Northrup King Company and the government to evaluate the efficacy of the company's corn borer resistant hybrids during the 1996 growing season.

EUPs are part of the EPA's approval process for herbicides, pesticides, and plants which are genetically transformed to provide resistance to insects and diseases. With this EUP, Northrup King will plant the equivalent of 3,000 bags of Bt corn seed in small- and large-scale plots in 39 states this spring.

"The scope of this EUP — 7,100 acres larger than last year — gives agronomists, our sales force and dealers, and farmers who act as plot cooperators an opportunity to more closely evaluate the performance of our Bt hybrids in small- and large-scale plots," said Edward T. Shonsey, president and CEO of Northrup King.

"Throughout the industry, quantities of Bt corn commercially available for planting this year are extremely limited," Shonsey said. "So the number of acres in the Northrup King EUP means that farmers will have a better opportunity to observe the efficacy of these hybrids alongside traditional hybrids in a field or test plot near their own operations."

Shonsey noted that the test plots also will further demonstrate product performance and increase demand for the product for the 1997 planting season when larger quantities of Bt corn seed will be available to farmers, after the EPA has granted full registration.

Case Continues Operating Earnings Growth

RACINE, Wis. — Case Corporation reported first-quarter operating earnings of $126 million, an 18 percent increase over $107 million in the comparable period last year.

Net income, before accounting charges and extraordinary items, was $75 million, or $1 per share, a 7-percent increase over $70 million, or $0.96 per share,reported by Case in 1995.

Net sales in the first quarter of 1996 were $1.105 billion, compared to $1.141 billion in the first quarter of 1995. Results from 1996 reflect the timing of large product shipments overseas and comparatively lower sales resulting from actions taken during 1995, including the divestiture of 45 company-owned retail stores and the sale of Viscosity Oil, that are included in the 1995 period. In addition, the company's progress in implementing its supply chain management initiative to reduce working capital enabled Case to lower production relative to 1995, resulting in lower seasonal inventory buildup.

"We further improved our profitability in the first quarter through aggressive cost management," said Jean-Pierre Rosso, chairman, president and chief executive officer.

Rosso said the company made progress in its operating strategy of growing its business through geographic expansion and the introduction of new products, while aggressively cutting costs. "We lowered our industrial selling, general and administrative expenses by $28 million in the first quarter, while increasing our spending on new-product development."

In the first quarter, the company completed its acquisition of Concord Inc. The addition of Concord, a seller of air drills in the United States, strengthens the Case IH line of agricultural equipment and adds to Case's technology base for advanced products.

In addition, the company launched a bid to acquire Austoft Holdings Limited of Australia, the world's largest manufacturer of sugar-cane harvesting equipment. Holders of more than 90 percent of Austoft's common stock have accepted Case's offer. Case expects to complete the acquisition in the second quarter.

In March, Case announced the sale of 324 combines to Uzbekistan for more than $50 million. This follows the purchase of 300 combines by Turkmenistan in 1995 and is a further result of Case's efforts to develop the emerging Central Asian market for agricultural equipment.

Worldwide sales of Case equipment to dealers were strong in several segments, led by increases in agricultural equipment in Europe and other international markets, and increases in construction equipment in North America.

Retail unit sales worldwide rose by 6 percent in the first quarter of 1996. The increase was led by strong retail sales of construction equipment in North America and agricultural equipment in Europe and Australia/New Zealand.

Case Credit Corporation, the company's retail financing subsidiary had net income for the forst quarter of $26 million, a 24-percent increase over $21 million in the first quarter of 1995. The increase is primarily due to the timing of gains from a $625 million asset-backed securitization. Case Credit completed a $600 million asset-back securitization in the first quarter of 1995 and routinely completes such offerings, the timing of which can impact operating results.

Case Credit's serviced portfolio increased 14 percent as of March 31, 1996, compared to March 31, 1995. New equipment acquisitions increased by 6 percent, compared to a year ago.

Case Credit has maintained excellent portfolio performance. Delinquencies of more than 30 days represented only 1.7 percent of the total portfolio at the close of the quarter.

In addition, Case Credit completed its first debt offering in the quarter. The company sold $200 million in public bonds and will use the proceeds to fund its growth plans.

Sheep, Wool Festival Highlights Show Events

KAREN BUTLER
Maryland Correspondent

WEST FRIENDSHIP, Md. — The Maryland Sheep and Wool Festival was held here at the Howard County fairgrounds recently.

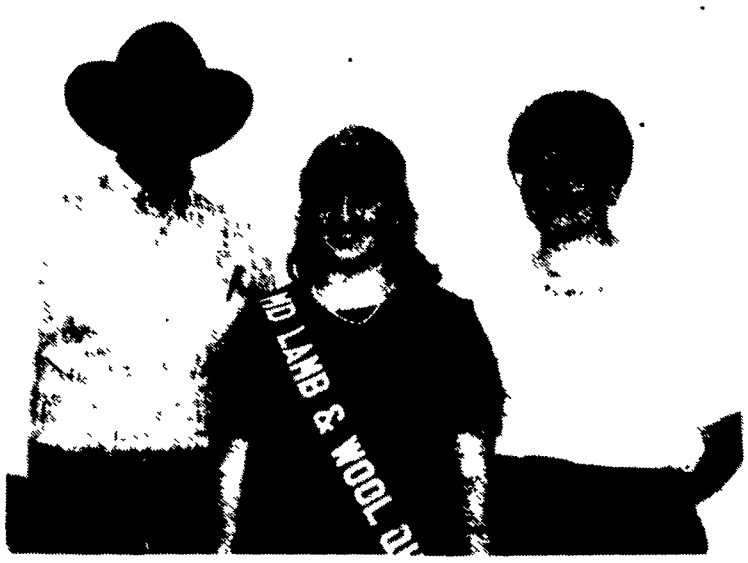
Thousands attended the two-day celebration, which included sheep shows, fleece and shearing competitions, a sheep to shawl contest, and a lamb cook-off.

Highlighting the festival's opening was the coronation of new Maryland Lamb and Wool royalty. The pageant was hosted by outgoing Lamb and Wool queen Laura Langlotz.

Elyssa Hevner, 14-year-old daughter of Clifford and Karen Hevner of Johnsville, Frederick County, is the new lamb and wool queen. Elyssa, a seven-year member of the Johnsville 4-H Club, has 10 Cheviot breeding ewes and one Hampshire ewe. She showed the champion ewe at the state level in 1994 and 1995 and won the shepherd's lead contest at the state fair last year. She has shown her sheep in Montgomery and Frederick counties, at West Virginia and Maryland state fairs, and at the Keystone International Livestock Expo. She also participates in the Make It Yourself with Wool contest. Elyssa has a sister, Kirstie, and a brother, Tymon.

Jennifer Biser, also 14, will serve as lamb and wool princess. Jennifer is the daughter of Joe and Ruth Biser, Keymar, Frederick County. She has been a member of the Johnsville 4-H Club for three years. Jenny's main projects have been her six Cheviot breeding ewes. She has shown at the county and state levels and last year had the reserve grand champion female at the state level with a Hampshire. Jenny also participates in both the shepherd's lead and the Make It Yourself with Wool contests. She has a brother, Joey.

A keynote speaker at the festival was Dr. Ron Pope, director of raw wool services for American Sheep Industry (ASI), who gave a talk on "Practical Tips For Survival in the 21st Century." He focused primarily on wool and marketing.



Elyssa Hevner, center, is flanked by her parents Clifford and Karen Hevner.

Pope said that there have been many changes in the industry over the past 40 ears. Forty years ago, wool was a familiar commodity; people wore it, and it was very much a staple in the fiber industry. There were 40 million head of sheep in the U.S., producing 300 million pounds of greased wool annually.

Today, the contrast is dramatic: there are only eight million head, with an annual output of 63 million pounds of greased wool. Wool is considered a luxury fiber and accounts for only 3.8 percent of fiber use worldwide.

"Producer attitudes for the last 40 years have been based on tradition rather than moving forward," he said.

Wool prices have been on a decline since June 1995, with little firming in the market. Wool is a globally traded commodity, with Australia basically setting the price level wool will be sold at worldwide.

The U.S. is a big consumer of wool, but so are Europe, Japan, and some of the developing countries. Economic recession in Europe and the generally poor economies abroad have dictated a decrease in the quality and quantity of clothing consumers there are purchasing.

Economic hardship, coupled with a backlog of inventory at the retail level and the fact that wool is often being left off the menu as a purchasable item, have led to unprecedented inventory buildups at the processing and retail levels.

Pope sees several areas the industry as a whole, with specific emphasis on wool growers and marketers, can address in an effort to stay viable in the face of these circumstances.

The first is production. As a whole, he said, we ignore wool. A lot of management practices focus on lamb production. Shearing is based on lambing time. Feeding practices are based on lambing. Wool is often seen as a by-product. We can have a 50 percent loss of a lamb crop. But it's very different to have 50 percent fleece loss. The fleece may be shorter or less in weight. This leads us into a false sense that there is nothing we can do, Pope said.

From the left: Elyssa Hevner, newly crowned lamb and wool queen; Laura Langlotz, outgoing queen; and Jennifer Biser, new princess.

Most people can quote lambing percentages, but without the Wool Act and incentives in place, some may not even keep accurate records of total wool production. He stressed the importance of knowing pounds of wool produced, clean weight, fiber diameter, strength, length, and appearance, and using these records as management and marketing tools.

Wool preparation also plays a big part in the viability of the operation. Since the wool grower is producing a raw material, he has no way of passing on the cost of preparation to anyone. This is true as a whole in the agricultural community, said Dr. Pope, and it carries over into wool and lamb production. Not all wool on the fleece is the same. In both the cottage industry and on the commercial side, Pope advocates separating fleece according to what's in it, and also suggests grouping like wools together.

Years ago, brokers had huge sorting warehouses for wool. Then, as the brokers went out of business, mills started to grade, sort, and separate wool. About eight years ago, mills found that it was not cost effective; that they could buy Australian wool and not have to worry about it. As the domestic clip keeps getting smaller, the domestic grower must grade and sort the wool himself, or another profit center in the chain will. Not every producer needs to totally skirt and class their clip,

Vitamin E: Triple Duty For Sows, Pigs

PRINCETON, N.J. — The potential to increase litter sizes and improve animal health is leading animal scientists to advise pork producers to double-check the vitamin E content in their sow rations.

Currently, the National Research Council (NRC) lists the vitamin E requirement for adult swine as 20,000 international Units IU) per ton of feed. Over the past few years, however, studies by Ohio State University scientists have indicated that when sows' rations provided vitamin E at double or triple that levle, litter size increased by an average of one pig and the incidence of costly mastitis-metritis-agalactia (MMA) in newly farrowed sows decreased significantly compared to controls.

Meanwhile, other research has shown that when the lactating sow's diet included higher levels of vitamin E, her nursing piglets had a boost in their developing immune systems.

The discrepancy between NRC requirements and recent research isn't all that surprising, said Dr. Donald Mahan, who led the Ohio research team. For one thing, the NRC itself has emphasized that its requirements are minimums, designed to prevent classic deficiency signs rather than promote optimum health and performance. Additionally, the current NRC requirement for vitamin E, which was published in 1988, is based on studies that were done a decade or longer ago — and that used growing/finishing hogs rather than sows.

"The bottom line is that if a producer is trying to keep a sow in the herd for a longer period — which is what many producers are trying to do — I would probably recommend a minimum of 60,000 IU per ton of ration to meet that requirement for reproduction and enhancing the immune response," Mahan said.

MMA presents an especially common problem in newly farrowed sows, Mahan said, "because the birth process disrupts a lot of tissue. And with the exposure of what are basically open wounds or sores, there's a greater opportunity for pathogenic bacteria to cause disease."

It's long been known that a strong immune response requires adequate vitamin E stores. The connection still isn't fully understood, but in experiments with swine and other livestock, researchers studying increased supplementation have reported benefits ranging from increased survival rates in newborn pigs and lambs to fewer, less severe outbreaks of mastitis in dairy cows.

"If the sow is in a good vitamin E status at the time of farrowing, she can have a lower incidence of MMA. In addition, her milk production and the subsequent reproductive effects appear to be enhanced," Mahan said. Scientists have also conducted studies suggesting that increased levels of vitamin E can play another role in reproductive performance (affecting litter size) through the formation of prostaglandins involved in reproduction, he notes. However, research in this area is continuing.

Producers' goals will largely determine how much vitamin supplementation proves optimum, Mahan said. "If your goal is simply to maximize reproductive effects, you can probably see results at around 36,000 to 54,000 IU per ton of feed," he said, based on his studies. "But the immune response seems to require a higher level of vitamin E in the diet. If you're interested in reducing MMA, vitamin E is apparently effective at 60,000 to 80,000 IU."

In balancing rations to optimize vitamin E intake, Mahan cautions against relying too much on the levels found in feedstuffs. "Grain, for instance, is a very good source of vitamin E, but once the kernel is cracked or the grain is heated or exposed to minerals, the vitamin E will be destroyed," he said.

University of Kentucky swine nutritionist Dr. Merlin Lindemann estimates that it will probably cost about $1.50 per sow per year to supplement sow rations at these levels of vitamin E. "It's not going to take much more than a tenth of a pig per sow per year for that increased level of vitamin E to pay off," Lindemann said. "Or looking at it another way, you won't need more than one or two sows to conceive that might have had to be rebred to pay for that higher supplementation level."

Reed Henderson High School, Central Bucks West High School, Abington High School, Wilson High School, Germantown Friends School, Lower Merion High School, and Central Bucks East High School.

Sheep, Wool Festival

but they do need to make a high quality wool and focus on the types of wool that are returning the most money.

Marketing is the final area Pope sees as vital to the success of the operation. He said wool is the only industry where the buyer tells the seller what it is that he is trying to sell. By knowing exactly what it is you're producing, which requires becoming familiar with your wool — the diameter, fiber length, and other factors — you can most effectively market it. He suggests coring the wool clip and selling it on the core. "Several pools core their wool and want a price on the core. Some even want a clean price," he said. "Put it into volumes you can objectively measure."

Communication between the seller and customer is important, whether you are niche marketing to the cottage industry, or pooling your wool, Pope said. On the small scale, a handspinner may be interested in the life story of a particular sheep. Turn that information into a marketing tool.

The same holds true when talking about larger quantities. Commercial processors need volume, approximately 150,000-250,000 pounds to process at one time. They don't buy one lot that size — they blend: American with Australian, Eastern with Western domestic, in many different combinations. They don't mix wide varieties or fiber diameters, but the blending that they do allows them to produce a cheaper product that still has the value they need. Information that the grower provides is valuable to them. They can then utilize the information to their advantage in blending.

'Horse Of A Ewe' Wins Maryland Sheep Show

KAREN BUTLER
Maryland Correspondent

WEST FRIENDSHIP, Md. — A Black Lincoln yearling ram belonging to William Gardhouse of Gardsmere Farms, Schomberg, Ontario was chosen supreme champion ram here at the 23rd annual Maryland Sheep and Wool Festival.

Judge Budd Martin, from Willard, Ohio, said he liked the 270-pound ram because it combined excellent qualiy with exceptional size, and called the entry a "changer ram" for the industry. "A lot of people have a ram that has either the quality or the large size, but if they have one, they don't have the other. This ram has both," Martin said.

Gardhouse also won the premier exhibitor for the Lincoln and Black Lincoln classes. In 1993 he won supreme champion ram with a white ram entry. He is the fourth generation of his family to farm the 100-acre Gardsmere Farms in Ontario, which was established in 1902.

According to Wes Limesand, shepard at North Dakota State University, who also judged the sheep shows, the females were a sounder group of sheep overall as compared to the rams, with stronger tops, tighter shoulders, and more correct feet.

"Explosion," a 225-pound natural colored medium ewe entered by Challis Farms, Metamora, Michigan, won supreme champion ewe honors. "A horse of a ewe, very correct, she's a tremendous fitted ewe but she's as good as she looks," was how Judge Limesand described the winning yearling entry.

Challis Farms, represented by Sari, Chris, Alyssa, and Andrew Scott, has been coming to the sheep and wool festival for eight years. They had the champion ewe with another yearling four or five years ago.

Trophies for the champions were tributes to Ernest E. and Florence B. Hall, of Keymar, Md. The Halls were on the committee that started the festival 23 years ago. They also had the first natural colored sheep flock in Maryland, according to their daughter Kendra Hall. The ram trophy was presented in memory of Mr. Hall, who passed away seven years ago, and the ewe trophy was presented in honor of Mrs. Hall.

Penn State To Host Mushroom Conference

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — As many as 250 people will converge on Penn State's University Park Campus in June for an event sure to spawn interest among those who produce, study, or are otherwise involved with mushrooms.

The Second International Conference on Mushroom Biology and Mushroom Products will be held June 9-12 at the Nittany Lion Inn. The conference will feature presentations by more than 60 of the world's top mushroom scientists from 21 countries, including several from Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Penn State is the leading mushroom research institution in the United States," said conference chair Daniel Royse, professor of plant pathology. "We've just marked 70 years of mushroom research at Penn State, so it's fitting that we host this prestigious event."

Pennsylvania leads the nation in mushroom production, a ranking largely due to Penn State research and cooperative extension programs. During the 1994-1995 growing season, 355 million pounds of Agaricus bisporus mushrooms (the common button variety) worth $274 million were produced in the state, representing 45 percent of the U.S. harvest.

Royse said a wide range of mushroom topics and varieties will be discussed. "The conference will cover genetics and breeding, medicinal aspects of mushrooms, cultivation technology, mushroom nutrition and physiology, pest management, postharvest technology, and nonfood products," he said. "There also will be a limited number of commercial exhibitors."

Among those scheduled to speak is Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brosius, who is also a mushroom producer. Brosius will address challenges and opportunities facing the mushroom industry.

In addition to Royse, those from Penn State expected to make presentations are Ramaswamy Anantheswaran, associate professor of food science; Robert Beelman, professor of food science; David Beyer, instructor in plant pathology; Shelby Fleischer, assistant professor of entomology; Paul Heinemann, associate professor of agricultural engineering; C. Peter Romaine, associate professor of plant pathology; and Paul Wuest, professor of plant pathology.

To learn more about the conference, call the Office of Conferences and Short Courses at (814) 865-8301.

Herbicide-Resistant Corn Completes Review

DEKALB, Ill. — Dekalb Genetics Corporation said that its newly developed corn seed resistant to the herbicide glufosinate has received all necessary clearances from U.S. government agencies, and that its glufosinate resistant hybrids may now be commercialized in the U.S.

The Food and Drug Administration and the U.S. Department of Agriculture have both completed their reviews of Dekalb's Glufosinate-resistant corn.

The FDA informed Dekalb that it had concluded its food and feed safety assessment review of corn grain, fodder, and silage derived from the glufosinate-resistant line, and it has concluded that no issues are raised that would require premarket review by the FDA. Dekalb provided data to the FDA showing that glufosinate-resistant corn is not materially different in composition, nutrition and safety from corn that is currently grown, marketed and consumed by animals and humans.

Separately, the USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) determined that Dekalb's glufosinate-resistant corn line does not pose a plant pest risk and therefore is no longer subject to APHIS regulations. This determination was based on information provided by Dekalb, a review of other scientific information, comments received from the public, and field tests.

Dekalb will market test quantities of glufosinate-resistant corn this spring. The herbicide's manufacturer, AgrEvo, anticipates that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency will approve the use of glufosinate on corn by the 1997 growing season. AgrEvo will market the herbicide under the trade name Liberty™.

"Harness® Xtra: the best weed control I've seen in years"

Rick Schlosberg, 2,000 acres
Newtown Square, Pennsylvania

"I had always been a big Bicep user in corn, until I started seeing frequent mid-season escapes of giant foxtail. Even spiking the Bicep with extra Dual didn't work. To make a long story short, I went with Harness® Xtra on 90 percent of my acreage in 1995. And, I'll be doing it again this year.

With Harness Xtra, I had excellent long-season weed control of giant foxtail, fall panicum and triazine-resistant lambsquarters. I saw no escapes at all for the first time in over six years. It saved me money, too, because I didn't have to spike it to get consistent control or come back with resprays.

I'm using Harness Xtra 5.6L in a big way this season. I encourage you to do the same."

Belgian Team To Appear In E-Town, East Earl

GREENDALE, Wis. — Country's Reminisce Hitch, the first six-horse hitch ever to walk the entire distance across the United States from Maine to California, will soon be making an appearance in Lancaster County.

The hitch will be at the Elizabethtown Fairgrounds in Elizabethtown, Pa. on Saturday, May 25. During the appearance, the six champion Belgians will be harnessed and driven by David Helmuth, allowing him and his wife, Vikki, to show local folks firsthand why this team was named the "No. 1 Six-Horse Hitch in America."

The horses will be on display from 12 p.m.- 5 p.m. At about 3 p.m., David Helmuth will present a short program and, weather permitting, the horses will be in harness for driving around 4 p.m.

The hitch is owned by Country and Reminisce, two of nine magazines published by Reiman Publications of Greendale, Wis.

Throughout its travels, the hitch has always recognized and honored senior citizens — even its bright red wagon exhibits a bold "We're Pulling for Seniors!" slogan. In turn, seniors feel a special affinity for the big horses, often harking back to the days when they or their family worked the land with draft horse teams.

Typically, Helmuth gives away a number of prizes at each performance — to the oldest person attending, to the person who traveled the farthest, etc. He also answers questions from the crowd and reminisces about the team's unhurried walk from Kennebunkport, Maine to San Diego, Calif.

In all, the 16-month trip through 18 states covered more than 3,800 miles, and the horses walked every step of the way. The team and crew averaged about 10 miles a day, six days a week, resting on Sundays. They made special stops at senior centers all along the route.

Since that historic trip, the hitch has traveled even farther in their colorful semi-trailer — last year their travels around the United States covered 23,000 miles, almost equaling the distance around the earth.

The giant Belgians, which weigh over a ton each, have thousands of enthusiastic fans who closely followed the accounts in the Reiman magazines describing the team's trek across America. Many of the magazines' subscribers have come to know each horse by name and regard them as "their" horses.

As a result, the editors often refer to the horses as "the only six-horse hitch in the world co-owned by over 12 million people!" These "owners" often drive hundreds of miles to see, meet and pet the giant steeds, and this will likely be the case when the hitch appears in Elizabethtown.

The team's cross-country walk along rural roads was aimed at recognizing senior citizens. In all, they gave rides to more than 50,000 people — mostly seniors — in the hitch's custom-made red wagon, adding meaning to the wagon's bold slogan.

During their upcoming visit to Elizabethtown, David and Vikki will chat with the crowd about their trip, answer questions about the horses and their custom-built wagon and semi, and autograph copies of the book and the video detailing the trip.

The hitch will then be at Good's Store in East Earl, Pa. on Memorial Day, May 27.

The horses will be on display from 12 - 5 p.m. At about 3 p.m., David Helmuth will present a short program and, weather permitting, the horses will be in harness for driving around 4 p.m.

Vikki and David Helmuth, shown here with the Dalmatian hitch mascot, are in charge of the daily operations of Country's Reminisce Hitch. They were married during its 1993-1994 journey across the United States, and regard the rest of the trip as the most memorable honeymoon imaginable.

DMI ECOLOTIL Systems

DMI's patented point makes the difference

SOFTEN YOUR SOIL FOR HEALTHIER PLANTS AND BETTER YIELDS

When you use a D.M.I. ECOLOTIL or ECOLOTIGER Subsoiler with D.M.I.'s patented winged tooth, you break up more hardpan than you do with the straight teeth used by other subsoiler manufacturers and you get results you can see and spend...

1. Plants grow fuller and deeper root systems so that the plants are healthier in wet or dry years.
2. Yields are higher because the plants can get the moisture they need to mature - you earn more!
3. Government Regulations for crop Residue is not a problem - 30" shank spacing causes minimum disturbance to the surface while fracturing the subsoil strata beneath the surface - the result is residue stays put, but the soil below is softened so plants grow better.

ECOLOTIL SYSTEMS

DMI System	MIN. HP Required
3 Shank Ecolotil	80
5 Shank Ecolotil	130
527 Ecolotiger	130
530 Ecolotiger	170
730 Ecolotiger	250

Each of these machines can be equipped to meet your particular needs. Your choices include shank style, shank arrangement, coulters/discs, rear levelers or point style.

HOOBER'S EXPERIENCE WITH DEEP TILLAGE SYSTEMS IS YOURS FOR THE ASKING!

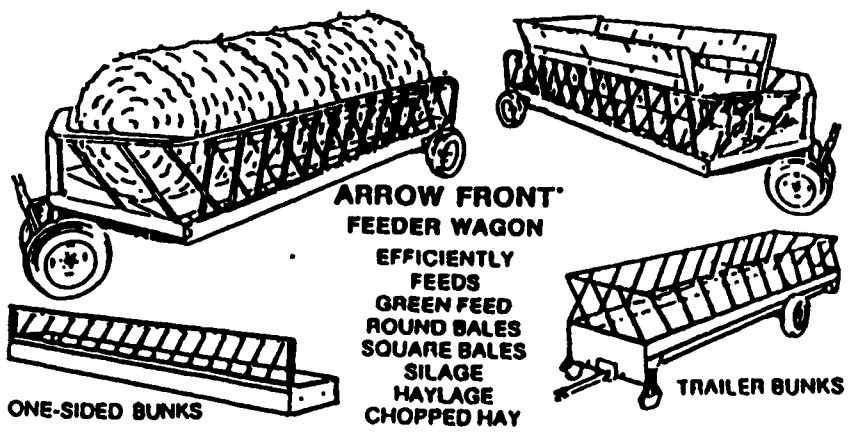
S.I. FEEDERS

REBATE

$100 ON ALL ARROWFRONT® FEEDER WAGONS
$20 ON ALL BUNKS UNTIL JUNE 30, 1996



The S.I. Feeder is designed to minimize feed loss. This is done with functional slant bars, low set design, proper pan depth, feed saving edges, and other concepts to reduce waste.

The S.I. Feeder Wagons have the versatility to feed any type of grain, forage, or even a total mixed ration. Four foot high inserts are options to increase load capacity and to control the downward flow of feed.

The Arrow Front design replaces the old goose-neck concept, eliminating 90 degree welded joints, making it stronger and more durable.

Get an S.I. Feeder now to get maximum efficiency of your quality feeds.

NEW HOLLAND

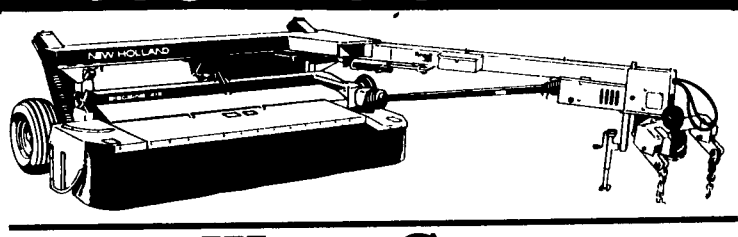
415 DISCBINE®



WIDE CUT- EVEN CONDITIONING

You'll love the wide-cutting performance of the Model 415 Discbine® disc mower-conditioner. Seven discs make an 11-1/2-foot cut through your toughest crops. And with the New Holland torsion-bar roll-pressure system, you get consistent conditioning even in uneven crop conditions. Plus, roll pressure decreases automatically to let slugs pass through.

Stop in and see the big performance of the "415".
